NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The R. Edwin Harnish family of Nine Points was honored with the Outstanding Cooperator Award at the 41st annual Lancaster County Conservation District dinner meeting Thursday night.

More than 200 people attended the event, which honored several district members for their involvement in a multitude of conservation programs.

National DHIA Recognizes Individuals, Elects Officers

MADISON, Wis. — The National Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) presented three prestigious awards during its National DHIA Convention Awards Banquet, held March 17 at the Holiday Inn - West, in Middleton, Wis.

The association was formed for the purpose of maintaining accurate records of the performance of animals within the various dairy cattle breeds so as to improve the breeds through selective breeding programs based on genetically influenced performance.

During the 27th annual meeting, members who attended also reviewed audited, financial statements for 1989, 1990 and 1991, reviewed its national activities, reviewed the value of national DHI records, and voted on officers and proposed amendments to its resolutions and bylaws.

Donald W. Long, a 52-year-old Holstein breeder and past president of the Wisconsin Dairy Herd Improvement Cooperative (WDHIC), in Weyauwega, Wis., was this year's recipient of the H. Victor Joachim Distinguished Leadership Award.

This award goes to an individual who has shown exceptional leadership and guidance in all areas of the DHIA.

In speaking about Long, Pete Giacomini, WDHIC chief execu-

Ohio Dairy Breeders Propose Herdbook For Unregistered Holsteins

First of two parts
KARL BERGER

WASHINGTON, D.C. — If a cow looks like a registered Holstein, produces milk like a registered Holstein and, most importantly, is bred like a registered Holstein, is it a registered Holstein?

Now for the first time, registered Holstein breeders across the country are grappling with these questions. Breeders from Ohio have put forward a proposal that the national Holstein Association consider establishing a second herdbook for at least some of the vast population of grade, or unregistered, black and white cows nationwide.

As was the case in 1988, the last time this issue came before the association as an official proposal, the Ohio plan is generating considerable debate and some controversy among local members. Several breeders attending a recent Winter Forum in Frederick, Md., one of a series of such meetings held across the country, spoke out bitterly

Susquehanna Co. Dairy Day Draws 600

RONALD CLARK
Susquehanna Co. Correspondent

FACTORYVILLE (Susquehanna Co.) — The third annual Susquehanna County Dairy Day was held at the Elk Lake High School late last week. The feature speaker of the day was Boyd Wolff, state of Pennsylvania Dairy and Agriculture," Secretary Wolff reviewed the vast changes which have taken place in the dairy industry during the lives of many of those in attendance.

In presenting his address, "State secretary of agriculture.

While stressing that family farms are still dominant in the state, he referred to the days when changes were made from backyard dairies of one or two cows, to the days when larger herds took over and milk was sent to local creameries in cans. From those methods we have now progressed to much larger herds, from cans to bulk tanks, from shovels and wheelbarrows to barn cleaners to liquid manure storage; from individual milking units to parlors and pipe-

Staff Members Recognized

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — This week, two staff members at Lancaster Farming received recognition for their reporting efforts. Editor Everett Newswanger won the 1992 Northeast Farm Communicator's Nor'Easter Contest photo/journalism award, and staff writer Andy Andrews received the FFA honorary membership award from the Grassland Chapter at New Holland.

Earlier this year Newswanger also received the public relations award from the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs. Andrews' recognition comes from Garden Spot High School from where he was graduated.

Ephrata H.S. Discontinues Relationship With Young Farmer Program

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — On Monday night the Ephrata School District board of education agreed to substantially decrease the funding and discontinue its relationship with the Ephrata Area Young Farmer Program (EAYFP).

The program, with 123 members in the region, asked for approximately $75,000 for funding in the 1993-1994 fiscal year, but was granted, under an agreement, only $28,000.

The program funds obtained from the district at the meeting will be used to hire an advisor to oversee the possible formation of a committee to direct the duties of the director, according to Nevin Horning, Lititz, president of the EAYFP.

Horning told Lancaster Farming that the young farmers are in the process of forming that committee, but the details and projected dates have not been established as of presstime. Horning said details will be worked out in a series of meetings in the near future.

According to Ackley, the school district has been trying to disassociate itself of the young farmer program for "quite a few years," he said. According to Gary Krafft, board president, the idea of separating the EAYFP from the school district had been under deliberation for a number of years.

The Young Farmer program has been identified by Drew Myers, curriculum and instruction committee chairman, as a type of "booster club" for the high school students' FFA program. According to Ackley, the EAYFP serves farmers in the region with a wide array of programs beneficial to area farms and agribusiness.

Horning said the organization operates Tent City at the Ephrata Fair, which is a major source of their funds, and many other programs.

"It's a whole new ballgame now," said Horning, though he said he wants the program to continue as it has been.

N.E. Chicken Parts

March 19, 1992

Buyers continued to inquire for additional trucklot volumes of boneless skinless breasts for immediate needs but supplies were very tight. Trading was reported at 1.95 with asking prices for additional product trending higher. Supplies of line run breasts were in close balance early this morning but additional product started to show by mid-morning. Legs traded at lower prices and additional product was available. Buyers inquired for leg quarters for next week needs. Other items were adequate at current prices.

CASH GRAIN AND SOYBEAN PRICES CONTINUED THEIR UPWARD CLIMB WEDNESDAY ON EXPORT AND WEATHER NEWS. WHEAT 4 TO 7 CENTS HIGHER, EXCEPT ST. LOUIS SHOWING 1 CENT LOWER. CORN 1 TO 2 CENTS HIGHER. SORGHUM 1 TO 4 CENTS HIGHER. SOYBEANS 1 TO 2 CENTS HIGHER. WHEAT PRICES JUMPED SHARPLY AGAIN, SUPPORTED BY PROSPECTS FOR INCREASED EXPORT DEMAND AND SLOW COUNTRY MOVEMENT OF SPRING WHEAT. TRADERS AWAIT USDA'S ANNOUNCEMENT OF APRIL'S CREDIT ALLOCATION FOR EXPORT CREDITS TO CIS, AS REPORTS INDICATE LARGE DEMAND FOR WHEAT. CONCERNS OVER FREEZE DAMAGE TO HARD RED WINTER WHEAT AREAS, STILL EXIST, AS OVERNIGHT LOWS FORECAST THIS WEEK COULD CAUSE PROBLEMS IN SOME AREAS. HIGHER CORN PRICES ALSO REACTION TO EXPORT CREDIT POSSIBILITIES TO CIS AND OTHER RECENT GOOD EXPORT SALES. REPORTS INDICATE USDA WILL RELEASE A NEW 45 MILLION BUSHEL CORN CATALOGUE AND A 10 MILLION BUSHEL SORGHUM CATALOGUE. SOYBEAN PRICES ADVANCED ON WHEAT RALLY AND BOOST IN SOYOIL/SOYMEAL MARKETS. ACTIVE EUROPEAN TRADE PUSHED SOYMEAL PRICES TO HIGHEST LEVELS IN TWO WEEKS. EARLY HARVEST RAIN DELAYS REPORTED IN BRAZIL, ADDED STRENGTH TO BEAN PRICES.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MARCH 23-29, 1992

FIRE!

MARCH 25, 1911 the workday was nearly over at the Triangle Shirtwaist Company in New York when a disastrous fire swept through the premises Most of the seamstresses were young immigrant women who wouldn't have dared to complain about the deplorable working conditions Although labor laws forbade locking factory doors while the workers were present many young women died in the fire because locked doors trapped them on the eighth and ninth floors Some jumped to their death when fire engine ladders were inadequate to reach them When it was over more than 145 workers had died as a result of the fire

This terrible tragedy is also remembered as a turning point in labor history as it resulted in many needed health and safety reforms, as well as efforts to improve fire-fighting equipment

Fire and ashes are but sad reformers.

TIP OF THE WEEK

In a multi-story building, hang a sheet out the window. This universal signal tells firefighters, "Someone's in here, come get me."

EARTHWISE

We all know automobiles take a high toll on the environment but most of us aren't ready to give them up Since the average car exhausts twenty pounds of carbon dioxide for each gallon of gas used here's a tip to lessen your car's negative impact and save money too Whenever possible don't allow your car to idle for more than a minute Turn it off at the drive-through bank, or while waiting for kids or carpoolers A half-gallon to a gallon of gas is used per hour of idling, actually wasting more gas than restarting the engine

COCOA FUDGE CAKE

- 1²/₃ cups flour
- 1½ cups sugar
- ⅔ cup cocoa
- 1½ teaspoons baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups buttermilk
- ½ cup shortening
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift together dry ingredients Add remaining ingredients Blend 1 minute on low speed scraping bowl constantly Beat 3 minutes at high speed scraping bowl occasionally Pour into 9 x 13 greased and floured pan Bake at 350 F for 35 to 40 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean Cool and frost as desired

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Very cold, snowy then sunny warm Clear warm southeast Finally rain, some snow

SOUTHEAST: Clear and warm heavy rain Florida then heavy rain flooding deep south clear hot Florida

MIDWEST: Clear and mild cold and snowy central Then cold and freezing rain clearing central

NORTHWEST: Mild freezing rain east snow north and mountains Rainy, cool then sunny and cool coast

SOUTHWEST: Rain snow mountains, clear, warm desert, then rainy

NOW IS THE TIME

To Practice Nutrient Management

While Harrisburg is working on nutrient management legislation, farmers need to start working on their nutrient management plans now.

By developing nutrient management plans now, you will give yourself more time to implement your plans.

If problem fields with nutrient levels are identified now, you will have additional time to develop a plan to deal with these fields. Changing crops grown, amount of fertilizer and manure applied, using a cover crop, and double cropping fields are ways you may use to reduce nutrient levels in soils or take advantage of surplus nutrients from animal manure.

Nutrient management plans do not have to be very complicated process. Applying the quantity of nutrients needed to produce a crop is the underlying principle of nutrient management.

To accomplish this, you need to soil test on a regular basis, know the nutrient content of your manure and commercial fertilizer, and the nutrient requirement of the crops you are growing.

For more information on nutrient management, consult the 1991-1992 "Penn State Agronomy Guide" available at your county cooperative extension office.

To Improve Barnyard Management

Barnyards are very busy places on most farms. Over the years, many farmers have increased the number of livestock to remain profitable. However, the size of the barnyards often has not increased with the number of livestock.

Unfortunately, this increased livestock activity may cause water quality and animal health problems if not properly managed.

Jeff Stoltzfus, cooperative extension project associate, offers the following ideas on ways to improve barnyards:

• Direct manure and runoff into a manure storage area.

• Direct clean water away from the barnyard.

• Use rain gutters to direct roof runoff away from barnyards.

• Terraces up slope of the buildings direct water around barnyards.

• If water needs to leave the barnyard area, allow it to pass through a grass filter strip before it reaches a stream, road ditch, or other waterway.

Barnyards are often the most visible part of any farm. A well-managed barnyard will go a long way toward improving the image of farmers with their urban neighbors.

To Understand The Five C's Of Credit

Alan Strock, extension farm management agent, reminds us the amount of debt you may carry depends on your credit worthiness.

Lenders use the five C's of credit to determine this worthiness.

The five C's are:

1. Character — your personal characteristics and past history with debt repayment.

2. Conditions of the loan. Is a necessity, need, or want?

3. Repayment Capacity — includes cash flow projection, collateral, and present market conditions.

4. Capital — your net worth or difference between your assets and your debts.

5. Collateral — How much of your collateral or assets are you willing to pledge to this debt?

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Getting up after you have fallen down strengthens you muscles."

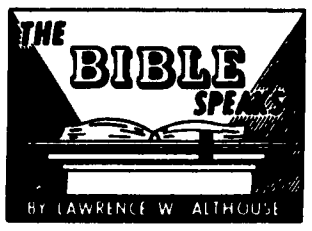
BOY, UNCLE OTIS, YOU'VE HAD THIS OL' TRACTOR FOR A LOT OF YEARS. WHAT IS THE SECRET TO KEEPING A PIECE OF MACHINERY RUNNING YEAR AFTER YEAR AFTER YEAR.?
DAVE CARPENTER



Background Scripture:
Mark 7:24-37.
Devotional Reading:
Amos 5:4-15

The story of Jesus and the Syrophoenician woman in Mark 5 is a troubling one. The problem is how to understand Jesus' sharp rejection of the woman and her request for him to heal her daughter who was "possessed by an unclean spirit" — Let the children first be fed, for it is not right to take the children's bread and throw it to the dogs" (7:27). It is bad enough that Jesus turned down her humanitarian request, but we cannot help but be shocked when he likens the woman and her daughter in "rings"!

What is the explanation? Scholars offer several. One explanation is that Jesus really meant what he said, that he did not want to minister to the gentiles and that he shared the common Jewish perception that non-Jews were "dogs" by comparison. This explanation has the weight of the obvious, for it is precisely what Mark tells us that Jesus said. Another explanation is that Jesus would not have responded like this — not if the picture that we have of him in the rest of the New Testament is at all accurate — but these words attributed to him by Mark represent the prejudice against gentiles that existed in the very earliest church.

TO MIMIC & MOCK

The third alternative — which is the only one that is comfortable to me — is that Jesus used these words to mimic and mock the popular sentiments of the day, perhaps even the prevailing sentiments of his apostles, or that he used these words to engage the woman in a purposeful dialogue. In a sense, he could be halting her, to see just how much faith could be mustered by this gentile.

Her response to his refusal would tell him a lot about her. There are several passages in the gospels in which this playful, badgering style of Jesus is evident and I believe that is what is involved in this incident.

And what did Jesus learn through this interchange? That gentiles can be just as persistent and ingenious in responding to the promises of the gospel. Jesus has made several efforts to demonstrate to his followers that even believing Samaritans could be closer to the kingdom than themselves if they failed to respond in faith. This woman, a Syrian woman from the Phoenician coast, wasn't even a Samaritan, but a pagan Greek. Although she had not the benefit of the Jewish faith, her love for her baby and her personal belief in Jesus made the difference.

There are times when we need to do just what she did: to stubbornly persist with Jesus when the answer we're getting doesn't seem to be the answer we should be getting. Whether or not she realized that Jesus was jousting with her, she persists without bitterness: "Yes, Lord; yet even the dogs under the table eat the children's crumbs" (7:28).

A TIME FOR HONESTY

I don't know how this woman knew that Jesus was more compassionate than he appeared to be at this moment. I know because, when I read of Jesus in the rest of the gospels. I see a Jesus who would not turn her away and who would never regard her and her child as "dogs." So, if from our reading of the New Testament and sharing with other Christian people tells us that the answer we seem to be getting from Jesus is not congruent with what we know of him, it is time for us to be honest and say, "Wait a minute, Jesus, surely that is not what you mean to say to me!"

If we do, Jesus will not be angered by our persistence, nor insulted at our honesty. If anything, he is likely to say to us as he did to the woman: "For this saying you may go your way..." and that which we were seeking will be found.

MEAT MATTERS MOST

HOME BRED lambs like these have been winning for me and my buyers in the Mid-Atlantic area. They LOOK GOOD. They HANDLE GOOD. They CUT GOOD. My latest triumph was Grand Champion carcass at the 1991 Keystone International Livestock Exposition. Check these stats.

FOUR GOOD REASONS TO USE FORCE.

IT'S TOPPING THE PERFORMANCE CHARTS. In university trials and three years of on-farm use, FORCE® soil insecticide has demonstrated superior rootworm and cutworm control. IT'S A PERFECT MATCH FOR ACCENT AND BEACON. Unlike Counter 15-G, FORCE keeps your rescue herbicide options open because it won't interact with Accent or Beacon. IT MAKES SURE EVERYONE WINS. The unique class of chemistry in FORCE means low toxicity to humans and birds. Plus, its active ingredient binds tightly to soil particles so it resists leaching into groundwater. FORCE. THERE'S NOTHING ELSE LIKE IT. The unique pyrethroid chemistry of FORCE is your best choice. There's nothing else like it.

Always read and follow label directions carefully.

Dauphin Conservation Farmer Believes In Looking Closely At Soil Particulars

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LYKENS (Dauphin Co.) — For conservation farmer Gerald Wiest, soil sampling on his farm started about 1969 — culminating in recognition as Conservation Farmer of the Year last week by the county district.

Wiest maintains about 50 sows on his farrow-to-finish farm and manages about 300 acres. He said conservation work has always been an important part of his life, ever since he helped farm with his father, Woodrow Wiest, a hog and beef farmer in the Lykens area.

Gerald Wiest obtained his first soil sample in 1969. "I've been soil sampling ever since," he said.

The soil sample taken 23 years ago was part of an ASCS cost-share program for the application of lime. In a recent interview, Wiest pointed out that soil sampling wasn't new then — farmers had been using it for years. But the importance of analyzing the nutrients of the farmland was in Wiest's operations because he believes in the importance of keeping and maintaining good soil conditions.

Gerald Wiest, Dauphin Co. Conservation Farmer of the Year, recently built a circular concrete manurage storage structure to replace an old concrete-lined timber facility on his farm.

Wiest employs the use of strip crops, contour strip crops, terraces, and grass waterways, such as this one, on his farm.

Soil conditions

"I was always amazed at how many farmers, large operators and small, fell into the rut of the traditional, 'well, if we're planting small grains, we use so many hundred pounds of a certain analysis fertilizer,'" said Wiest, "regardless of what manure was applied or what the soil conditions really were."

Wiest said that his degree in biology from Mansfield University (Tioga County) helped him understand the interrelationships between soil fertility, yield, and the importance of conservation practices. Also, after the floods caused by Hurricane Agnes in 1972, Wiest worked for the Soil Conservation Service restoring streams, which helped him gain hands-on knowledge about conservation practices.

"My background in the sciences told me that things should be more accurate than that — there're ways to keep a closer tab on the particulars, especially the nutrients, to get a good balance, to get a good crop," he said.

On the farm based northwest of Lykens, Wiest owns about 57 acres and rents an additonal 250 acres. He markets about 200 tons of hay per year. Last year, Wiest managed about 120 acres of corn, 50 acres of soybeans, 50 of wheat, 40 of barley, 30 of alfalfa, and 50 of timothy hay. He grows most of the crops necessary for the 50 sow farrow-to-finish (he markets about 350-400 finished hogs to Hatfield Meats, and another 300 or so he sells to growers).

Fit into rotation

He grows wheat and barley to fit into the rotation for corn weed control, and barley is fed to the gestating sows. The remainder of the crops are sold on the cash market.

He said the soil conditions on his acreage are good for most crops. The land is Calvin-Leckhill based, which includes deep, well-drained soils. Because of the existing shale conditions, nutrient control is top priority, and there are many practices Wiest uses to maintain water control and stop nutrient and soil runoff.

Wiest employs the use of strip crops, contour strip crops, terraces, grass waterways, stone-lined waterways, water control structures (such as drop inlets and underground tiles), and he uses no-till and conservation tillage in designated areas.

Manure is applied to fields depending entirely on nutrient needs, according to soil tests. "I've just always done that," he said. "If it meant hauling (manure) six miles, that's where it went."

National DHIA Recognizes

tive officer, said, "Long has demonstrated long term and outstanding leadership to the DHIA for 30 plus years at the local, state and national level. He has served DHIA at all levels with sincerity, dedication and selfless devotion to purpose. His contribution, and the progress DHIA has made under his leadership would take several pages to list."

Long served as president of the National DHIA from 1986 to 1988 and was chairman of the NCDHIP Policy Board. He served 12 years on the National Board of Directors, which is thought to be longer board service than anyone in the history of the organization.

At the state level, Long served as president of WDHIC since 1978, the year he was first elected to the board.

"His statesmanlike qualities, sense of fairness and deep concern for the good of the DHIA member has made him successful. He proves that flash, personal ambition and desire for the limelight are not prerequisites for an outstanding leader. He has never sought position for self gain, nor has he shunned them when urged to accept a challenge in difficult times," said Giacomini.

Long's farming operation includes 450 acres with 110 registered Holstein cows. Holstein activities are another of Long's extra responsibilities as he headed the Wisconsin delegation to the 1988 National Holstein Convention. He has also been an active 4-H leader.

In other recognition, Dr. Wallace Taylor, of Provo, Utah, was this year's recipient of the National DHIA Outstanding Service Award.

Taylor has provided leadership at both the state and national levels in his 32-year career in DHIA. Taylor is currently the extension dairyman at Utah State University and has served at the position since 1977.

Taylor's experience with DHIA started in 1959, as a graduate student at Iowa State University. He was involved with computerizing DHIA records for Iowa and eight surrounding states and helped establish the Mid-States DHI Computing Center at Iowa State University.

Also, Taylor served as extension dairyman at the Ohio State University where he was involved with computer work for Ohio and Indiana. In 1971, he was responsible for transferring their processing to the DHI Computer Center at Provo, Utah.

Another national award was presented to Eugene Long, manager of the Mid-East DHIC.

This year's recipient of the Martin Wilson Leadership Award, Long has moved up through the ranks since his start as a DHI supervisor in Maryland in 1944.

Long has served as a state DHIA manager for 23 years. A highlight of Long's position was his recommendation of a successful merger of the Maryland DHIC and the West Virginia DHIA, which created the Mid-East DHIC.

He has served as general manager of the Mid-East DHIC since 1988.

In 1969, he was instrumental in moving all records processing to the DHI Computer Center in Provo, Utah; prior to that time Maryland DHIC was processing its own records for their members.

In addition to his managerial duties with DHIA, Long developed and implemented the supervisor incentive program for Maryland DHI field employees in 1969. He also created the Verification Testing in the early 1970's, which was adopted by several other state DHI organizations.

Also offered during the annual gathering was the NDHIA Technology Symposium, which highlighted five views on how to measure and manage production efficiency.

J. Robert Kindig

Mike Quesnell

The seminar dealt with a comparison of personal computer (PC)-based programs for record management and examined methods for linking production decisions to the economic impact on the farm.

The economic impact methods provide a link between DHIA production records and the farm financial statements, as opposed to the farm bookkeeping system.

Also speaking was Alan Koepke, a Wisconsin Holstein breeder, who talked about farm management techniques to show that milk production management and economics mix. His nearby farm was also open for tours later in the week.

Other speakers discussed the connection between DHI records and management, analyzing farm operations and challenges for cooperatives. Dr. Michael Tomaszewski talked about how some beef producers are now linking production to financial information.

The newly elected National DHIA Board of Directors is comprised of Mike Quesnell, president, Western Region director, from Twin Falls, Idaho; John Noble, vice president, Northeast Region director, from Lindwood, N.Y.; Tomm Sammon, secretary, North Central director, from Faribault, Minn.; Doug Runyon, treasurer, Southern Region director, from Kopperl Texas; J. Robert Kindig, outgoing president, executive committee, North Central director, Conestoga (Lancaster Co.); Dough Temme, director North Central Region, Nebraska; Ken Beswick, Western Region, Turlock, Calif.; Terry Ellingson, North Central Region, Poplar Grove, Ill.; Dale Eade, Southern Region, Florida; Buddy Nichols, Western Region, Canon City, Colo.; Dick Scott, Northeast Region, Norridgewock, Maine; Dave Watkins, North Central Region, Moscow, Iowa.

40 heifers. In addition to rented land, they farm 90 acres of corn, 30 acres of small grains, 70 acres of hay, and three acres of pasture. There are also 26 acres of woodlot and six acres of wetlands.

Conservation practices installed on the farm include waterways, terraces, subsurface drains, and diversions. Also, the Harnish family uses various conservation practices, including rotation, residue management, controuring, and strip-cropping.

In March 1987 the Harnishes signed up with the Chesapeake Bay program to help them install a manure storage system that allows for better utilization of the nutrients from the manure, according to Edwin Harnish.

Harnish said the philosophy of conervation comes from his father, who purchased the farm in 1936.

Also at the banquet, representatives of the Pepperidge Farm in Denver were honored with the Outstanding Stormwater Award for their efforts in land use, sediment control during construction of the new plant, preservation of existing natural features, and innovative stormwater management design, according to the district. Also, representatives of the various contractors that were employed during construction were honored.

The Municipal Public Service Award, which recognizes water quality improvement projects, went to the recent improvements made to the Little Conestoga Creek tributary along Belle Valley Road in Lancaster Township.

The Outstanding Service Award, for recognizing an individual's outstanding contributions to the district, was presented to Aaron Z. Stauffer, vice chairman of the district board of directors.

The Youth Conservation School Special Service awards were presented to James Shirk, a senior at Penn State majoring in environmental resource management, and Matthew Ehrhart, who was graduated from Penn State with a bachelor's in environmental resource management.

Donald L. Spickler, director of the National Association of Conservation Districts from Washington County, Maryland, spoke to the guests. Spickler congratulated the Lancaster Conservation District for its highly successful history in soil conservation. He also spoke about the need for the districts to be proactive and to reach out to the urban areas to educate people about the importance of conservation.

Grain Sorghum Under Study At Meeting

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — Elwood Hatley, agronomist, Penn State University, will discuss production practices for grain sorghum on Monday, March 30 at the Conewago Township Municipal Building in Dauphin County. The program will be held from 10 a.m. until noon.

Topics of discussion include variety selection, growth habits, production tips, and pest control.

The municipal building is located off Route 743, three miles south of Hershey, and two miles north of I-283. Turn west onto Ridge Road.

For additional information, call Paul Craig, Dauphin County Cooperative Extension, (717) 921-8803.

Conservation Farmer

Went six miles

"In other words, when I sit down and analyze my soil samples . . . those that have the lowest fertility and are going to be growing a crop that's going to require that they aren't of optimum, that's where the manure went. If it meant hauling it six miles, it went six miles," he said.

Wiest said he applies manure "maybe once in 5 years" on the farmland he owns. In the past, many farmers put the manure on the fields closest because that was the easiest way to manage it — but in light of environmental concerns, according to Wiest, nutrient needs are the deciding factor.

Also, Wiest maintains about 20-25 acres of woodlot under the Timber Stand Improvement program. The woodlots are managed for environmental considerations.

The streams are managed "for aesthetics, for wildlife, and for timber production," he said. The forester made suggestions for managing the stands. "We maintain habitat trees," said Wiest. "Every dead tree we didn't cut down. We left trees so there is a place for the racoons and the squirrels and the birds."

Pure environmentalist

"At that point in time, I was more a pure environmentalist, I guess," he said. "I tried to provide the best of everything I could. I think to a certain degree I'm still that way."

Wiest emphasized the importance of keeping the soil in place using conservation practices and keeping the organic matter in the soil up with a balanced fertility. The higher the fertility and organic matter, the greater chance crops can endure drought stress.

Last year, during the drought, the no-till corn in soybean stubbles "looked the worst but yielded the best." The initial stress caused by the "blistering heat," he said, made the stand questionable, but in the end, the soil moisture, when the rains came, was maintained by the organics left by the stubble.

"The experts claim that your best yields will come from a corn crop that has been stressed at some point in its growth," said Wiest. "But not quite to the extent of last year — that was a little excessive!"

Averaged 40 bushels

Wiest said the yields for corn on his farm averaged about 40 bushels. Some fields yielded about 100 bushels per acre, but some yielded only 15 bushels.

Also, using contour strips proved extremely cost effective, Wiest said. "If there's one negative, it will create point rows in many cases," he said. "It becomes a preference how you want to handle those point rows. I prefer to work them to the middle of the strip." Wiest said he works the outside contour rows first and then finish with straight center point rows.

Wiest said that is honored to receive the recognition from the Dauphin Conservation District. He said that, as his operation expands, he will be looking carefully at the changing technology to see what additional conservation practices he'll need to implement on his farm.

"I like to be active, I like to be involved in things going on," he said. For that reason, the past nine years Wiest has devoted to working as a member of the district. He has also served as county extension director. "I don't like everybody else making policy for me all the time."

Can't sit back

"I think that's important in today's agriculture — you can't sit back and watch what's going on. By then it's too late, you're going to be forced to comply with what some well-doer has decided is the best for your operation. It might not necessarily be so."

Wiest said that he plans to install a pesticide containment facility on his farm. He submitted a plan and location to the SCS office for review as part of a state pilot project that will put construction money up as a cost-share. The facility will include a concrete pad with curbing and a sump area to control spills. SCS is reviewing the plans.

Also, Wiest recently built a circular concrete manurage storage structure to replace an old concrete-lined timber facility.

Wiest said that man and the environment can work together to manage the existing resources. He said, "I think there's a blend and I think man fits in very well with it, if he manages the systems correctly."

Management Program Gets Results

Editors Note: This article was submitted by Tom Droppo, Dairy Extension Specialist, Manitoba Department of Agriculture.

Manitoba, a province in West Central Canada, is located along the Canada/U.S. border north of the States of Minnesota and North Dakota.

The majority of Manitoba's 975 producers are located within 100 miles (160 kilometers) of the International border. The average herd size in Manitoba is 48.

Production averages for milk recorded herds are 15,720 lbs. (7,130 kg) milk 560 lbs (254 kg) fat, and 503 lbs (228 kg) protein. Housing systems are divided about two-thirds tie stall to one-third freestall.

In 1987, Manitoba had a provincial arithmetic mean bulk tank somatic cell count (BTSCC) of 524,000.

In 1988, the Dairy Section of the Manitoba Department of Agriculture introduced the Milking Management Analysis Program.

This program entailed a milking time evaluation by the province's dairy extension specialist.

Areas examined included milking procedures, milking system performances, teat/udder health, dry cow/fresh cow management, environment, and management/housing of replacement heifers close to calving. Follow-up visits were conducted as required.

A total of 148 milking times evaluations, comprised of 96 tie stall and 52 free stall operations, were conducted between January, 1988 and July, 1991. Herd production averaged 14,350 lbs. (6510 kg) with a range of 11,290 to 20,800 lbs. (5,120 to 9,435 kg).

Six-month arithmetic means prior to first visit were 838,000 for the BTSCC and 28,400 for the bulk tank plate loop (bacteria) count (PLC).

Producer response to the program was excellent with more than 90 percent of the evaluated farms reporting improvements in raw milk quality, udder health, milk production, and milking times.

Program results to date include:

- 61 percent decrease in the six-month arithmetic mean BTSCC from 838,000 to 327,000.
- 55 percent decrease in the six-month arithmetic mean bulk tank PLC from 28,400 to 12,000.

Commonly heard testimonials from producers who have adopted program recommendations include faster milking times, more complete milkout, healthier teat ends, fewer cases of clinical mastitis, and higher peak and total lactation production.

Area Evaluated	% Farms Having a Problem
Vacuum regulator	82%
Milk inlets/valves	73
System air leakage	72
Milk cane size	72
Milking procedures	70
Pulsation system	68
Milk line slope	65
Milking time	64
Vacuum pump	62
System design	60
Teat end vacuum	56
System sanitation	48
Rubberware, gaskets	48
Pulsation line	46
Dry cow management	44
Vacuum gauge(s)	42
Milk line flooding	38
Environment	30
Milk line vacuum	22
Hot water supply	22
Milk line size	20
Stray (N-E) voltage	20

As a result of this and other programs initiated by the department to improve milk quality, Manitoba's arithmetic mean BTSCC has steadily declined from a high of 610,000 in 1985 to an all-time low of 320,000 in 1990.

Ohio Dairy Breeders against the proposal.

But the idea has strong support as well. A straw poll taken at the Winter Forum in California indicated nearly unanimous approval, according to minutes supplied to the association's national office in Brattleboro, Vt., and a modified version won widespread acceptance at each of the two forums held recently in Pennsylvania, according to John Cope of Grantham, Pa., one of 16 national directors.

The breeders' answers may go a long way toward determining the nature of the registered Holstein business in the year 2000, not to mention the fate of the national association.

"We're really at the crossroads at this point," said Steve Kerr, who was installed as the association's chief executive officer last August.

The association has recorded operating deficits in five of the past seven years, including a record $1.246 million loss in 1991, according to association records. Only $15 million in investment income from reserve funds kept the association out of red ink for the year.

As part of a cost cutting effort begun last year, the association has reduced the size of its staff and continued a freeze on wages. It has plans to close some of its four area offices across the country. But, at its members' insistence, the organization has bitten the bullet on most of the fees it charges, barely raising them through most of the 1980s, according to spokesman Jim Yanizyn.

Last year also marked a nine-percent decline in registration numbers, from 395,000 to 360,000, the lowest total in years. Both the economy and a special moratorium in place in 1990 may have skewed the 1991 numbers. Registrations during the first two months are up 18 percent, according to association officials. Nevertheless, concern remains that the nation's largest breed organization may be on a downward trend.

Fueling that concern is the continued decline in the number of milk cows nationwide. The constricting market has forced a shakeout in other sectors of the industry, such as bull studs and dairy cooperatives, in recent years.

Unlike those groups, however, the Holstein Association has a vast, largely untapped market in the owners of the millions of grade Holsteins nationwide. With a dairy cow population of roughly 10 million in this country, registered Holsteins comprise only about 10 percent of the total, Yanizyn said. The vast majority of the remaining 90 percent are Holstein cattle that, in many herds, have been bred for generations to the same bulls as the registered population.

Although most observers concede that the best cattle — those whose genetic makeup maximizes milk production — are concentrated in the registered population, there are critics who claim grade dairy farmers have begun to outpace their registered counterparts.

"One of the realities that the Holstein Association is going to have to come to grips with is that the industry is changing and it is being changed by the grade dairymen who control 90 percent of the cows," said Dennis Halladay, editor of "The Dairyman," a monthly magazine based in Corona, Calif.

Halladay said dairy farmers on the West Coast and in the Southwest, whose production-per-cow figures lead the country, have even developed a bias against the average registered cow.

"There is a perception out here that a registered cow is a pampered luxury and can't compete in a purely commercial environment," he said.

Speaking at the Frederick forum, Kerr said the association is not doing enough to meet the needs of commercially minded dairy famers. The organization offers the Identified Holstein Female (IHF) program to keep track of grade cattle. In the past, IHF animals have been eligible for some, but not all, of the programs the association maintains for registered animals and, of course, such animals remain barred from inclusion in the official herdbook.

Since 1976, when the IHF program began, it has issued identification papers on more than 36,000 animals, Yanizyn said. The numbers dropped off sharply in 1991, however, an indication that the program is not providing what dairy farmers need, according to Kerr. In response, the association's board of directors has approved a number of changes and expansions to the current IHF program.

The Ohio proposal goes beyond these changes to establish an actual, albeit separate, herdbook for these animals, including bulls. Those cattle with at least four generations of verified parentage would be eligible for entry into this herdbook. Such cattle would carry a special prefix or suffix to distinguish then from traditionally registered animals.

Leadman Son To Prove

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — 7H4248 Rothrock Leadman Laser-ET*TL, a young sire bred by Rothrock Golden Holstein Farms, in Kempton, has been chosen to enter Select Sires' Program for Genetic Advancement sire sampling system.

Based on his outstanding pedigree, 7H4248 has been selected as one of 185 Holstein bulls from throughout the United States to enter the program in 1992.

In addition to being sampled through PGA Cooperator herds, this young sire has been selected as a super sampler. With this designation, he is available to all interested Holstein breeders.

Laser is one of the earliest Leadman sons to be sampled through artificial insemination. He is a linebred bull, being a maternal brother, maternal sister mating. Both are progeny of the great Valiant Lou Ella cow. Both the dam and grandam are Very Good 87 points and Excellent 92 with Excellent mammaries and a 3.4 percent lifetime protein.

Pro Ag Holds Annual Meeting

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — An "old home day" type atmosphere hovered over the Edgewood Restaurant in Troy, last week, as the Progressive Agriculture Organization (Pro Ag) held their first annual meeting.

Delegates, members, and special guests filled the restaurant to hear favorable reports from Board Chairman Bill Dagostin and Manager Arden Tewksbury.

One of the highlights of the annual meeting was an inspiring speech by State Senator Roger Madigan. Madigan congratulated the members of Pro Ag for their fine performance during their first year of operation. The Senator gave a fine up-date on wetlands regulation, proposed nutrient management legislation, as well as giving a thorough review regarding the possibility of obtaining a state-wide milk marketing order. Senator Madigan pledged his continued support to work with Pro Ag and other farm organizations.

The delegates considered ten resolutions that were presented by John Tewksbury, chairman of the resolutions committee. After much consideration the delegates voted to support a national effort in an attempt to secure enough signatures on petitions which would call for a national referendum, voted on by dairy farmers, to determine if dairy farmers want to continue the mandatory national advertising campaign. All dairy farmers are compelled to pay 15¢ per cwt. into the program, although dairy farmers can request part of the money to be sent to a state advertising program. The United States Congress passed the original law, without allowing dairy farmers to vote on the proposal. The delegates also voted to support a continuation of the Federal Milk Marketing Orders, but the delegates are requesting that prices paid to dairy farmers be determined by a national average cost of production formula.

Miss Robin Wilbur, Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess from LeRaysville, gave a very inspiring presentation to the crowd. Chairman, Dagostin gave Miss Wilbur credit for giving the best presentation by a dairy princess that he had ever witnessed.

Dagostin was recognized for serving as chairman of the steering committee for the past year. The steering committee has been dissolved, and a new Board of Directors has been elected to direct the activities of Pro Ag. Dagostin will be on the Board, but the chairman announced he would not be a candidate for the President of the Board.

Arden Tewksbury, manager of Pro Ag gave a report of the activities of the organization during the past year. Tewksbury commented on the fine support that Pro Ag is receiving from farmers, agriculture related business people, and friends of farmers. He reported the current membership of Pro Ag at 650, with 250 members coming from Bradford County. He also said that 40 businesses are members of Pro Ag.

Diet Can Cause Laminitis

C.M. BURNS
Vet. Sci. Ext. Assistant

Lameness in cattle can be caused by any number of things.

Sometimes the most common reasons for lameness have been eliminated and yet the condition persists. That is the time for you, your veterinarian and your nutritionist to look at what you feed your cattle.

Laminitis may occur as a secondary condition to rumen acidosis, acetonemia, mastitis, or metritis.

Sudden changes in diet, especially one that goes to a high concentrate, can cause changes in rumen function. Rumen microbes begin producing larger quantities of lactic acid. This in turn lowers the pH of the rumen contents, killing most of the normal rumen microbes.

As this condition continues, the cow will show signs of acidosis. Toxins are released into the cow's system, causing blood to collect in the extremities, such as the feet and legs.

Early signs of laminitis are similar to other metabolic diseases.

Cows' feed intake will drop as well as their milk production. They will become less active, lying down much of the time.

Cows will become lame. Any or all of their feet may become sore. They will walk with a stiff gate and become unwilling to walk on hard surfaces.

To diagnose this condition, your veterinarian will need to look at the history of the entire herd. With the help of laboratory results on blood samples and ration analysis, laminitis may be determined.

Prevention is much easier than treatment of this disease. Avoid sudden changes in diet, especially one that includes large quantities of concentrates. Make sure cattle receive adequate quantities of feed at regular intervals.

Other common causes of lameness include footrot, under-run heels, and overgrowth of the feet. Management practices will help in prevention and/or control of laminitis as well as the other causes of lameness.

Maintain good sanitary conditions in the housing areas. Make sure cows are not constantly standing on wet walkways. Proper hoof trimming can help reduce pressure on sore feet.

Area Farmers Attend National NFU Convention

DES MOINES, Iowa — More than 600 members from across the nation met in Des Moines, Iowa, recently for the 90th National Farmers Union convention. Among those participating from Pennsylvania were Robert Junk, President PFU, Fayette, Gerald and Amy Seyler, Clinton/Centre, Scott McNamara, Crawford/Venango, Allen and Lilian Deiter, Northumberland, Dave Stetler, Perry/Juniata, Terry and Aleta Pattison, Erie/Warren, Jack Rynd, Farmers Union Milk Co-op, Vera Philson, Farmers Union Milk Co-op.

International trade issues, targeting of farm programs to serve family farmers, and improved rural health care were among the major issues discussed by the convention.

The covention called for the resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan, because of his support for an international trade proposal which the farm group believes would "sell out American agriculture."

Farmers Union delegates said the proposal being considered under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) would spell disaster for American Agriculture. Instead, the farm group urged negotiation of a true end to the international trade war in agricultural commodities.

In its adopted policy, the Farmers Union said that family farmers were becoming "an endangered species" and therefore the nation required a new policy of "no-net-loss of family sized farm units."

The convention said the farm program benefits should be targeted to the production levels of family-sized farm operators. "Targeting would help reduce government costs, while furthering the sustainability of family farms, rural communities, and natural resources," the convention said.

The convention also called for a universal, single-payer government-operated national health insurance program which would provide comprehensive health services to all Americans. "After decades of debate, the health care crisis demands that this nation finally join the rest of the modern world in providing its citizens with a national health insurance program," the convention said.

The Farmers Union convention re-elected its national president Lee Swenson to a third two-year term. Frank "Bud" Daniels, President of the Montana Farmers Union was elected to serve as the organization's new vice president. He replaces Jack Kelsey, who retired from the post. Kelsey had also recently retired from his post as president of the Oklahoma Farmers Union.

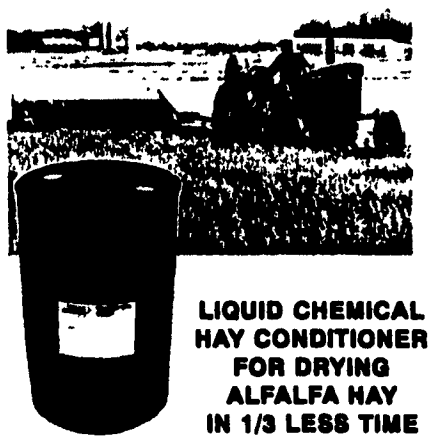
SWATHER'S CHOICE

ALFALFA HAY CONDITIONER

NEW!



LIQUID CHEMICAL HAY CONDITIONER FOR DRYING ALFALFA HAY IN 1/3 LESS TIME

Alfalfa and other legume crops have a coating of wax. While this coating is a natural protection for the growing plant, it is an inhibitor to moisture loss in field curing and to feed utilization in the digestive system of ruminant animals. The presence of this coating of wax also makes the hay stem brittle and less palatable to livestock.

Swather's Choice "washes off" the outside waxy coating of alfalfa, allowing for the water inside the plant to evaporate more rapidly than in untreated hay. Swather's Choice is actually a soap that is safe for livestock consumption and won't affect palatability.

In studies at Michigan State University, hay treated with the ingredients in Swather's Choice had higher protein and lower fiber. In a further study at Utah State University, cows consumed 2.2 pounds more treated hay per day.

Unlike conventional granular drying agents, Swather's Choice is a liquid chemical hay conditioner. It is easily tank mixed with water and requires only fifteen gallons per acre in most applications, compared with the conventional products that are normally applied at 30 gallons per acre.

Milk Producers-Distributors Hold 51st Meeting

COATESVILLE (Chester Co.)— The Pennsylvania Raw Milk Producers- Distributors Association, Inc. held their 51st annual dinner meeting on March 10 at Fineskinde Farm in Chester Co.

Twenty-two members and guests were in attendance from various Pennsylvania counties and one couple from Long Island, N.Y. This meeting is an annual event where members share a meal, fellowship and current relevant topics concerning marketing of their raw milk products. A regular business meeting and open discussion took place after the meal.

Raw dairy cow milk is sold by the majority of the members in attendance. There were also three individuals present who represent the goat industry, an area in demand in some sections of our state.

The guest speakers for the meeting were Garry and Betty Brown from Long Island, N.Y. A slide presentation was shown of their area of Long Island, where they have the Small Holdings Farm near Aquebogue. Raw milk, eggs, honey, fruits, vegetables, jams, crafts, and much more are sold from their farm on the island.

The present slate of officers were re-elected for another one-year term. They are: Joseph C. Stump, president from Stump Acres Dairy, York County; Ira Landis, vicepresident from Lancaster County; and Glendora M. Stump, secretary-treasurer from Stump Acres Dairy. Joseph C Stump, Ted Wilson and John St. John, Jr. were appointed to represent the Association on the Pennsylvania Farm Show Committee in Harrisburg.

The Association is open to all producers, marketers and interested parties involved in raw dairy products. More information may be obtained by calling Glendora M. Stump at 717-792-3216.

Lancaster County Holds Nutrient Management Meeting

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Farmers Association is holding an information meeting 7:30 p.m., March 31, at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center on proposed nutrient management legislation.

The proposed legislation in Pa. House Bill 496 would create a certification program for those who would make nutrient management plans, create regulations through the existing state Conservation Committee, create a non-authoritarian advisory committee to review regulations, and create a threshhold limit for the amount of livestock per acre.

The bill would also require the state Department of Environmental Resources to research, evaluate and make recommendations for the curtailment of nutrient contamination of watersheds by onlot septic systems and other non-point sources of nutrients, such as storm sewer systems and commercial lawn fertilization.

Major criticizm of the bill stems from the role of the state Department of Environmental Resources (DER) in enforcement and regulatory authority, the number of farms which would have to comply with the creation of management plans, the lack of a complete elimination of local rule over nutrient management, and the overwhelming focus of the bill on agriculture and not other sources of nutrient contamination.

A panel of people involved or concerned with the proposed legislation has agreed to speak and discuss the merits of the proposal.

The bill has passed the House of Representatives and is currently in the Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee.

Opposition to the measure has risen recently because of differences between the legislation's worded intent and the expressed intent of its crafters.

Those who are scheduled to appear are state Rep. John Barley, who is also part owner of a large Lancaster County farming operation; Michael Brubaker, who owns and operates an agronomic consulting service business in Lancaster; Phil Garber, a county farmer; Dave Dumeyer, research analyst for the House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee; George Wolff, state lobbyist and Lebanon County farmer; and a representative from the state Department of Environmental Resources, which is the proposed enforcement agency.

The panel is to be moderated by retired county extension agent, Jay Irwin.

Individual Cow Reports Coming

Pennsylvania DHIA replaced its Life History Sheet with an Individual Cow Report. Pennsylvania Dairymen can expect to see the Individual Cow Report with the monthly DHIA reports starting this week.

The front of the report, laser printed on Standard 8.5" x 11" paper to reduce costs and broken into six major portions to provide maximum readability, is among the most complete in the nation, including information available from other processing centers along with expanded genetic and reproductive information as well.

The top left section features herd owner name and address, type test, and date tested received and analyzed at the DHIA Service Center. Immediately beneath this is information on the current lactation which includes a maximum of 15 tests (including any dry data). If more than 15 tests have occurred since calving, additional pages will be printed. The section below the test area contains a summary of the cows current lactation for a record in progress. This box also flags dry and removed cows with complete records.

A large section at the bottom of the page summarizes all previous lactations. Space limitations allow for only nine records here, but mature animals with more than this will again have additional pages printed. This area also summarizes 365 day data for herds enrolled on the option. Five small boxes across the bottom display lifetime averages and totals for production and components.

Complete genetic information for this cow, her sire and dam, appears in the section at the upper right. Below this is a Reproductive Management review.

The reverse side of the reform contains graphs showing production and linear SCC score, as well as protein and butterfat percentages. Beneath this is a complete listing of progency, and estimates (via Parent Average) of the genetic merit of these calves.

The new Individual Cow Report replaces the Life History Sheet, and will be produced as an enhancement to the existing program. Interested members may receive the Individual Cow Report on all animals monthly for $0.02/cow/month plus postage.

To Jump-Start Feeding Efficiency, Think Custom Farm Seed Waxy Corn Hybrids.

It's no secret that digestible starch content in corn is the single ingredient that aids in the production of increased milk in dairy animals and faster weight gain in livestock. Experts say up to 25% more.

Regular dent corn is composed of a combination of 75% Amylopectin starch ... the more digestible starch ... and 25% Amylose starch ... the less digestible starch.

CFS waxy is 100% Amylopectin starch. That means 25% more digestible starch is available for your operation.

Think about this CFS waxy for 1992 ...

CFS W7551 (111-115 RM) ... Vigorous growth ... Excellent yield potential ... Good stalk quality ... Excellent drought tolerance.

PARS, Inc. markets Custom Farm Seed throughout the Eastern United States. In addition to waxy hybrid corn, count on PARS for a complete line of CFS seed, including break-thru® alfalfa, soybeans and hybrid seed corn.

and pipelines; from bulls, often of low quality to artificial breeding and embryo transplantation; and to double and triple the production per cow in present-day herds.

Although maintaining that farming is still family-operational oriented, Wolff pointed to the technologies which make it possible to use labor and management better. The use of computers for all types of records pertaining to herd management is increasing, and even robotics for the milking process is being developed and placed in experimental use.

Some factors which have assumed greater importance are promotion, public relations, and environmental concerns. The Secretary described the dairy promotion programs in Pennsylvania, in which 250 schools participated in learning about milk programs and the use of milk by all types of consumers. In August of this year Food Month will be featured as a statewide project, and will assist in acquainting the general public with all food production, especially milk.

Gordon Moore, left, and Rick Empet, helped create the tractor safety theme at the Susquehanna County Extension exhibit at dairy day.

It is impossible to separate promotion and public relations efforts from environmental concerns. Federal demands are for greater protection of the environment, as well as for better and cheaper food, and greater concern over the care of livestock. Any singular departure from practices which appear to be detrimental are pounced upon by the media, and blown out of proportion by sensational reporting, often by persons who have little or no knowledge of what they are reporting. Because of these things, farmers have been and are continuing to work for "sustainable agriculture." No one should be more concerned about soil loss, and soil and water pollution, than the farmer, and no one is. Farmers, suppliers and agricultural societies and colleges are continually seeking safer methods of pest control, eliminating dangerous pesticides, and reducing amounts of control substances to the minimum. They place emphasis directly on preventing harmful practices, rather than having to clean up after damage has been done.

Equally important is nutrient management. There has been increasing concern about excessive nitrates in ground water. Last year Pennsylvania formed a task force which is helping farmers to coordinate the regulatory practices of various agencies, and help the farmers to understand how they interrelate. PA also cooperates with other states.

Our biggest task will be to educate consumers and the public about their own needs and also the needs of the farmers. Farmers can look for little help from irresponsible media whose chief aim is to sell news, and it is difficult to make good headlines out of good practices. Rather, worst-case examples are cited as the norm, and both producer and consumer suffer. The public must be made aware that farmers have to practice safe and humane husbandry of both the earth resources and livestock to stay in business. Too often, consumers hardly realize where the farm products, or others, for that matter, originate; they pick them off the super market shelf and give no thought to how they reached the shelf in the first place.

Susan Jayne, Susquehanna Dairy Princess, awards door prizes with the help of Elizabeth Semans and Tiffany Gesford, dairy maids.

In another presentation, Russ Carman, former furrier, spoke on the topic "How Will Animal Rights Affect Dairy Farmers?" Carman is a national spokesman on the subject. He insists that the purpose of the animal rights group is control — first of the producing farmer, and then using the farmer as a weapon to control everyone. The animal rights group holds the belief that humans have no right to interfere with any animal life: their goal is to reduce the number of people. They would accomplish this in several ways: by reducing medical research using animals; by limitation of food with resulting starvation of masses, and by euthanasia of undesirables: with their own group deciding who those undesirables might be. Another ploy is to use older people and undesirables in medical research to replace mice, rats, dogs, etc.

Carman drew a parallel between animal rights beliefs to NAZI philosophy, citing the human atrocities in physiological experiments and the murder of mil-

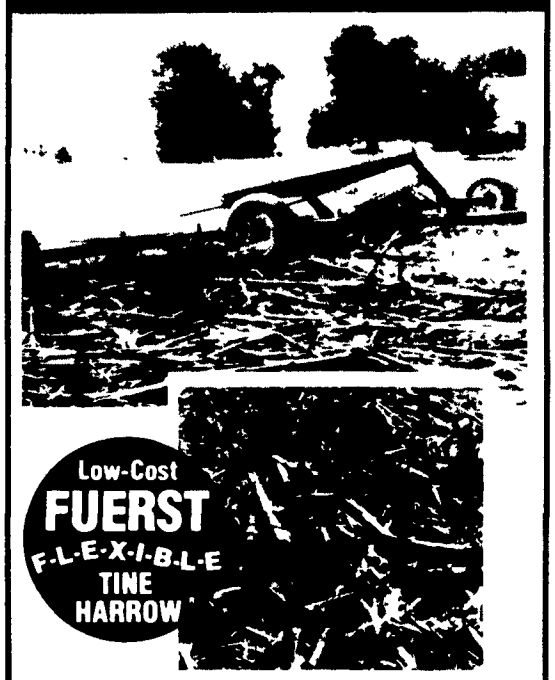
Shreds stalks yet won't plug up!



Low-Cost FUERST F-L-E-X-I-B-L-E TINE HARROW

The perfect tool for ridge and minimum till

The Fuerst harrow cleans ridge tops, creating excellent seedbed. Unique "Spreading Action"® tines hug the soil at faster speeds to shred and evenly spread no-till stalks in the spring

Dozens of uses:

The harrow used behind a disc or cultivator, incorporates herbicides in one pass. Used alone, it covers broadcasted seed, renovates, maintains pastures and more.

The harrow/cart (an optional harrow carrier as shown) follows tight turns, has folding wings for easy transport. Harrow and cart are available in 16 to 42 ft. widths.

"I believe the harrow works as good as a stalk shredder; it lifts and shatters the stalks and yet doesn't tear up the ground."

More Than 200 Ultraflo® Systems Have Been Sold In The Northeast Since 1985 - That's Over 14 Million Birds!

*We've freed over 80% of top egg producers from their CHAINS

Here are the facts why ULTRAFLO® outperforms chain feeders

FEED SAVINGS. Customers report 1/2 to 2 lbs. per 100 birds/day—over $10,000 per year saved on a 100,000-bird house. Year after year!

TROUGH DESIGN. High tensile steel for strength. No feed buildup or waste like chain trough.

NO RE-GRADING of feed, due to our design. Chain lets birds pick over feed while feeder runs.

REMIXES FEED. Our auger slowly revolves, keeping old and new feed blended. Chain doesn't, so feed can get stale.

REPAIR & MAINTENANCE. Ours needs the least of all feeders. Easy splicing with auger connector, and no troublesome corners or chain guides to replace. Saves money and time year after year.

SIMPLE OPERATION. "Push-Pull" Power Units with low HP motor are located along the feeder line as needed. Have hardened steel gears for trouble-free life. Microprocessor control lets you program feeding time to the second.

EASY AUGER CONNECTOR. Allows fast and simple installation, also quick and easy repair of auger if ever necessary. Auger and trough are both warranted 5 full years. Chain feeders are not.

Join the feed savers in 1992–with ULTRAFLO

U.S. ULTRAFLO owners saved at least this much feed in 1991. Based on producer reports of individual feed savings.

Calculated for an estimated 50 million birds @ 1/2 lb. per 100 birds saving @ 6¢/lb.X 365 days.

Egg producers have been putting up with obsolete chain feeders far too long. Now there's a better way: Chore-Time's proven ULTRAFLO Cage Feeding System. Since introduction, more than 80% of the top 54 egg producers* have gone to ULTRAFLO. A lot of smaller ones have too.

They've all looked at the advantages and chosen ULTRAFLO. That's because it makes them more profitable. Total egg production and egg size—these are the best benefits of our complete feeding system.

Why not check out the facts for yourself? Contact us now—or ask any producer who owns ULTRAFLO.

Because the only negative comments about our feeding system come from our competition—not from our customers.

Editor:

I see you had an article on Casey visiting some farm and comment as to cleaning up the Bay. The daily paper also had an article quoting the need to pass House Bill 496. Please have one of your writers give some honest information on this. According to what we were told, this bill will restrict the amount of manure a farmer can haul & when it can be hauled, calling for storage of manure over winter and possibly needing to chisel it into the ground or plow under in 48 hrs. Either one would not be possible for most Lancaster Co. farmers. Manure hauled on the field will have the nitrogen removed naturally by sun and air, and the potash will cling to straw until warmer weather comes. If put under ground, some of the nitrogen will find its way into wells.

I was told this Bill 496 is being pushed through without most people's, (farmer's) knowledge. The golf courses, parks, large lawns, etc. also contribute to the Bay problem but nothing is said about them. It looks like what the real cause behind this is city people want to live in the country but don't want to tolerate the farmer's and their smell, especially manure. Hope to see an article in your paper soon, being you are supported by a lot of farmers.

Editor:

The sheep people and the goat people of Lancaster County are being discriminated against, by the veterinarians. It seems to me that the veterinarians only want to deal with dogs and cats or cows and horses. I think it is time for someone to let them know what we think.

There are some of us who know how to use medications on our animals. But, the veterinarians won't allow us access to them. It has been my experience that, they don't even return phone calls. Maybe, it is because they learned that I have sheep.

I would like to know what is wrong with sheep farmers? Don't we rate the same consideration as other large animal farmers or dogs and cats owners?

I did find out the New Bolton Center will help. I thank them for their information. But, even that doesn't help much when the medications that I need are in the hands of the veterinarians.

If you would like to reply to these comments, if you have a question, feel free to call. Ph. 717-361-0531. I welcome the veterinarian's calls also!! Please call after 6:00 p.m.

lions of people during the Hitler era. He made reference to the people rights organization, "Putting People First," with headquarters in Washington, DC, which has made a beginning in combatting animal rights propaganda.

Following lunch served in the Elk Lake School Cafeteria, a short ceremony was held as a plaque was presented by the Susquehanna County DHIA to Byron and Pat Hunsinger. They were honored because their herd placed FIRST in Pennsylvania in 1991: the No. 1 DHIA Herd in the state. This is based on milk production, protein content, fat, low somatic cell count in milk, and the most favorable number of services to settle the cows in the herd, which includes 50 milkers and a total of 100 head. The Hunsingers live on a 300-acre farm in Dimock Township, which was designated a Century Farm in 1985. With their two sons, Brandon, 10, and Leslie, 13, they are able to maintain this efficient operation.

Dr. William Sischo, Extension Veterinarian, Penn State University, gave a talk on the Dairy Quality Assurance Program. As he stressed that the objective of the program was to place a high quality product on the sales shelf. The Program has developed a 10-point list of practices which will result in maximizing the quality of milk and milk products. This list can be obtained from your County Agent or your milk handlers.

The final speaker of the day was Thomas Calvert, who discussed intensive pasture management, including layout, fencing, management, and other aspects of getting the most out of pasturage. Using a series of visual aids he showed how grazing is the most economical and most effective of harvesting forage crops. Even though dairy farmers will need to continue to provide winter feed, year around pasture will be profitable, even in climates typical of ours. Some things to ponder: different varieties of forages will be needed, duration of grazing limited, preferably to one day, and with a maximum of six days; rest time should be varied according to weather conditions, including temperature and rainfall; proper fertilization; and grazing paddocks should be shaped and pastured in such a way as to protect the ground. Calvert described the financial benefits which could be gained, with greater nutritional value, less labor, and less machinery needs.

Door prizes were presented throughout the day, with drawings by Susquehanna County Dairy Princess Susan Jayne, assisted by her Dairy Maids, Tiffany Gesford and Elizabeth Semans. The prizes were donated by 50 to 60 farm suppliers.

Pennfield Recognizes Customer Dairy Production

SMOKETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Pennfield Feeds this week completed holding its 10 annual customer dairy meetings and awards programs.

This year, the company hosted such meetings throughout Pennsylvania and in Maryland. The meetings are for Pennfield dairy customers, award winners and those interested in learning more about the Pennfield feeding products and programs.

Except for the people who received awards based on rolling herd production, and breed averages, the program was identical in each locale.

On Thursday at the Good & Plenty Restaurant in Smoketown, Lancaster County, the second last meeting held, Dr. Tim Snyder, dairy nutritionist for Pennfield, discussed feeding and management strategies.

Later, Don Mahlandt, dairy feeds manager, talked about the position of the United State Department of Agriculture that bovine somatotropin (BST) would be approved for use late this year. He cited a staff report in the March 10 issue of Hoard's Dairyman that said as much.

Dr. Snyder talked about caring for herd replacements, dry cow management, feeding during early lactation, forage and feeding management, and discussed milk components and the need for a ration balanced for maximum production of both fat and protein, unless specific market demands stress one component over another.

Snyder said that in raising replacements, dairymen should consider feeding fewer replacements, but not shorting them on nutrition. He said growing heifers also need a balanced diet.

From the left, Don Mahlandt, dairy feeds manager fo Pennfield Feeds, congratulates Dale Fuhrman, of Earl R. Fuhrman and Sons, Hanover, for being awarded a President's Club jacket from Pennfield Feeds during the company's 21st dairy awards program.

Farmers need to not overcrowd facilities designed to hold heifers. Not only will it result in some heifers not being able to grow to potential, but it will also depress the growth of all animals in the overcrowded condition, he said.

He also said to ensure that all heifers have their vaccinations and to treat them for pests, such as coccidiosis and parasites such as worms.

He said that herdsmen should consider strategic worming which, depending on the wormer being used, entails giving a wormer before sending the heifers out to pasture in the spring, reworming after three or more weeks and then

RCMA Meeting Set

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Dairy farmer members of the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA) in southeastern Pennsylvania will meet to discuss efforts to increase the price farmers receive for their milk.

The meeting will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 24, at the Berks County Agricultural Center, Leesport, Pa. said Donald Duncan of Robesonia, director of RCMA Region 16, which includes: Berks, Lehigh, Northampton, Bucks, Montgomery, Chester and Delaware counties in Pennsylvania, plus the southern counties of New Jersey.

The meeting will also serve as the annual meeting for Region 17, Lancaster and York counties.

RCMA has been active throughout the year on a variety of projects, working to provide economic relief to farmers hit by low milk prices. An RCMA staff member will attend the meeting to update members about activities to provide an economic safety net for dairy farmers.

During the meeting, independent RCMA members will elect regional directors for Region 16 and 17 to serve on RCMA's board of directors, which meets regularly throughout the year. They will also elect a delegate and alternate delegate for each region to attend the annual meeting in December and represent the regions on membership matters.

Duncan, the director for Region 16, has served on RCMA's Executive Committee for several years. There is currently a vacancy for the Region 17 director's position. Elam Hover of Reading is the Region 16 delegate. Fred Wainwright Jr. of Bordentown, N.J., is the alternate. Thomas Zortman of Ephrata is the delegate for Region 17, and Christian G. Becker of Elizabethtown, the alternate.

All dairy farmers are invited to attend the meeting. RCMA is a dairy farmer organization committed to increasing the price farmers receive for their milk. Further information is available by calling 1-800-634-3723.

Stream Bank Fencing

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — If cattle make a mud slide out of your creek side, consider fencing the stream bank.

"Fencing is a low-cost, low-maintenance farm management tool that has many benefits," says Dr. Margaret Brittingham, assistant professor of wildlife resources in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Limiting livestock access to stream banks prevents erosion and loss of productive land. It also keeps streams cleaner."

As livestock clumb up and down stream banks, the soil collapses and erodes, polluting the stream with sediment. Fencing permits vegetation to grow, which binds and stabilizes soil.

Plants also block agricultural runoff, trapping sediment and pesticides while absorbing excess nutrients before they enter the stream. This sends cleaner water downstream and supports a good neighbor policy.

By providing food, cover and nesting sites, streamside vegetation attracts birds and other wildlife. Cleaner water means better habitat for fish. Wildflowers, shrubs and trees may be planted, covering stream banks with a variety of shapes and colors.

Fencing protects herd health too. Watering troughs are cleaner, more reliable sources of water than streams and are less likely to contain waterborne bacteria, which may cause bovine leptospirosis, mastitis and other ailments. Animals also are less likely to injure themselves on steep, crumbling stream banks.

Fencing your stream bank does not need to be an expense and a hassle. "Fences can be installed at little cost and may require little maintenance," says Brittingham. "Federal and state agencies encourage fencing, and many provide technical and financial assistance."

For more information about fencing and sources of assistance, see Stream Bank Fencing: Green Banks, Clean Streams, newly released by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Free copies are available at the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in your county, or from the Publications Distribution Center, College of Agricultural Sciences, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802; (814) 865-6713.

USDA Changes Dairy Refund Eligibility

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Dairy producers do not need to comply with highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions to receive refunds under the Dairy Refund Payment Program (DRPP), according to Richard Troutman, chairman of the Berks County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

According to Troutman, recent amendments to DRPP regulations eliminate that requirement in order for farmers to receive refunds on a 5 cents per hundredweight federal dairy assessment. The assessment was created as a milk production control.

"Refund payments under the program are not considered a price support payment for purposes of compliance with highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions," Troutman said.

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 calls for reductions in the price received by producers for commercial milk marketings beginning Jan. 1, 1991 and ending Dec. 31, 1995. The act also authorizes refunds of amounts deducted from the producer's milk proceeds each year, if refund payment provisions are met.

Troutman said refunds of amounts deducted from 1991 commercial milk marketings under the DRPP began in January. Producers will be eligible to receive a refund of the entire amount deducted from their milk proceeds if they provide evidence that they did not increase milk marketings over the immediately preceding year, he said.

DRPP procedures also clarified the policy on transferring milk marketing history between producers. "Except for eligible transfers that can occur during either the base period or refund period, the eligibility requirements for transferring milk marketing history remain the same."

NDB Creates, Fills Position

ARLINGTON, Va. — Working hard to build a strong two-way communications link between the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board (NDB) and dairy farmers, NDB has filled a new position, director of industry relations.

"Consumers are always changing," said Charles Garrison, director of NDB's industry relations. "Their needs and wants change the marketing environment for dairy products. NDB is a link between dairy farmers and the consumer market.

"Dairy farmers want to have a say in what NDB is doing, and they want to know how their checkoff nickel is being spent. My job is to help fulfill both of those needs."

Garrison earned a bachelor's degree in animal science at Purdue University and is currently attending the Kellogg Graduate School of Management at Northwestern University.

Most recently, he was a consumer information official at the National Live Stock & Meat Board. Before that, he was partner/operator of Garrison Dairy Farm in Russiaville, Ind., where he and his father managed the family dairy and crop operation.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, manned by 36 dairy farmers from across the nation, was established in 1983 to plan and run a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education to strengthen dairy's position in the marketplace. This effort is financed by America's dairy farmers.

SCS Seeks Stories

MORGANTOWN, W.V. — The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) in West Virginia wants stories from farmers about new conservation practices on cropland resulting from the 1985 and 1990 farm bills.

Nearly 5,000 farmers agreed to change their way of farming highly erodible cropland to reduce erosion. They did this to remain eligible for benefits and programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Rollin N. Swank, SCS state conservationist, said more than half the farmers who signed up are already practicing the planned conservation even though they have until Dec. 31, 1994, to comply.

"We want to know if these conservation measures have provided side benefits the farmers did not anticipate," Swank said. "Environmentally, everything is connected to everything else, and we expect other good things have come out of this program besides less erosion on cropland."

Farmers interested in telling their stories should send them with name, address and phone number to State Resource Conservationist Rick Heaslip, USDA-SCS, 75 High Street, Room 301, Morgantown, WV 26505, not later than March 17. Reports may also be faxed to (304) 291-4628.

Pennfield Recognizes

again after several more weeks.

Feeding calves colostrum has been recognized as being even more important than ever, Snyder said.

Citing research performed at Cornell University, Snyder said recommendations are that the calf get three to four quarts of colostrum within the first 12 hours, and even more importantly, that it get one to two quarts within the first hour after birth.

Last year Cornell researchers said that it was basically a race to get the antibodies in the colostrum into the gut of the newborn. If bacteria get there first, the calf's chances for starting out with a healthy gut lining are not as good.

The anitbodies protect the lining of the gut and strengthen the ability of the calf to take in nutrients while fighting off disease.

Dr. Snyder also said farmers should get and use a thermometer to use on animals which may be acting strange or not behaving normally.

He said that financially it does not pay to keep too many replacement animals. He said that farmers may want to cull harder and put more care into the fewer animals.

He said that farmers should expect to get about $1,250 for a bred heifer, because after raising a replacement animal, that is an average amount of money invested in that animal.

For dry cows, Snyder said that two weeks before freshening, a dry cow should start having the feed changed to increase grain consumption.

Two days after freshening, he suggested increasing the grain by up to 1 pound per day, as long as the cow eats it all, until the grain comes up to full feed.

He also recommended feeding a lot hay before freshening to bulk up the rumen, he said it seems to help prevent displaced abumasum.

Snyder also talked about balancing cations and anions as a preventative and therapy in treating milk fever. He said the company has a product which can be used for balancing the ions in the rumen. Niacin is also being used, he said, to help improve an animals ability to use fat and can reduce the potential for ketosis.

In other business, Mahlandt, the company dairy feeds manager, talked about feeding requirements for cows which he said can be expected to be make 120 pounds of milk per day or more, in part because of the use of BST.

Mahlandt promoted certain feeds which the company manufactures which are designed for use for high production dairy cattle.

The requirements for the president's club on rolling herd average was 19,000 pounds of milk for Holsteins; 16,500 pounds of milk for Ayrshire and Brown Swiss; 13,000 pounds of milk for Guernsey; and 12,000 pounds of milk for Jersey.

Special Olympics Supported By Milk Cooperative

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — It was a bitterly cold, late February evening, but area roadways were clear of snow and ice. In the ballroom of the Ramada Inn, three industrious females were whipping up a raspberry milk punch to serve to the hundreds of special athletes, officials and guests who were gathered for the Pennsylvania Special Olympics.

The crowd was across the corridor in the glass-enclosed Tropical Courtyard of the motel, dancing to the vibrating rhythms of popular music supplied by a Johnstown radio station announcer. The first day of special olympic competition, held at the Hidden Valley Mountain Resort, was now history. The time had come to relax.

On this night, the three women whipping up the punch were Dorothy Naugle, dairy marketing specialist for the Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc.; Mary Beth Lieb, Cambria County Dairy Promotion committee; and Audrey Stahl, mother of the Somerset County dairy princess.

With their three electric mixers whirring away in three separate dishpans filled with mauve-hued, gooey concoctions, the three were combining vanilla ice cream, raspberry sherbet and lemon-lime carbonated beverage, prior to adding the last ingredient which would be milk. Waiting on the sidelines to serve the milk punch to the guests were two dairy princesses: Vicki Stahl, Somerset County; and Carissa Itle, Cambria County.

Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc. was experiencing its first involvement with the Pa. Special Olympics. It had just contributed the historically largest, single cash donation — $10 thousand — to the organization. Naugle says the money paid for the production of Special Olympic coupon booklets in conjunction with the Georgian Place Outlet Mall and other Somerset area businesses. On the backside of each coupon in each booklet was the same catchy advertisement for the Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc. The combined total of coupons promoting Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc. in the booklets was around one million, according to Naugle.

The Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc. is funded solely by member farmers in a group of nine Pennsylvania counties. Naugle, its only employee, has her office near Hooversville. The job finds her keeping in touch with dairy organizations in the different counties and always planning marketing strategies. Each month she meets with the board of directors.

Supporting the Pennsylvania Special Olympics, says Naugle, provided, "A chance for us to be a first in working with this group. We saw it as an opportunity for promotion," she says. "They (olympic committee) allowed us to do anything we wanted during the Special Olympics."

So Naugle planned to serve the milk punch during the dance and milkshakes during the carnival. She made cream cheese and Bavarian mints for the final olympic banquet and had recipe cards printed.

"That's also where promotion comes in," she says. "People take the recipe and then they go home and try it."

Other persons helping during the carnival were Barbara Brant, Sue Tressler, and Evelyn Moyer from the Somerset County Dairy Committee, Erica Walker and Amy Gontis, the Somerset County alternate dairy princess.

The Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc. believes in the value of special olympics as a useful tool, for the whole objective of the games is to bring persons with mental retardation into the larger society under conditions (sports activities) whereby they are accepted, respected, and given an opportunity to become useful and productive citizens.

Special athletes receive a minimum of eight weeks of training with a certified volunteer coach, learning sport skills. Thus a foundation is laid for lifetime fitness, increasing social skills, confidence, discipline, and self-esteem, as the athlete/coach relationship develops. Additionally, the intellectual ability of the special athlete is continually being stretched.

Twenty-one seasonal sports are offered for competition in the Special Olympics. They include swimming, diving, cycling, equestrian (horse-riding), hockey, soccer, bowling, basketball, running, power-lifting, roller and ice-skating, speed skating, alpine and cross-country skiing, tennis, volleyball, and others.

As Bill Brice says, "Athletes have the opportunity to experience success."

Brice is the Western Pennsylvania development director for the Special Olympics. There are 23 thousand of these athletes in the state, according to Brice. He says approximately 350 are selected for state competition, having been the best in their level of ability. Last year 88 Pennsylvanians were in the international competition, he says.

Vince Malloy, 33, of Chester County, is a good example of the beneficial effects of Special Olympics. He's gone to the internationals twice. In 1987, Malloy says he won two gold and two bronze medals in the equestrian events. In 1991, he also won a gold medal in cycling. This year, he was in the alpine skiing event.

"I want to start coaching and get qualified in several things," says Malloy confidently. The spokesman for Athletes For Outreach makes many public appearances and has addressed the Philadelphia 76ers' professional basketball team.

Other dignitaries in town for the state event were Bill Parise, president of the Pennsylvania Special Olympics and professional athlete and Jerry Olsavsky, Number 55 of the Pittsburgh Steelers National Football League team.

"We feel we're giving the farmers a good return on their money," says Naugle. "We're not overstaffed. We try to keep an efficient operation."

Marketing the organization includes the investment of some good billboard advertising in several sizes and styles. There's one large sign along the Pennsylvania Turnpike which Naugle says they are lucky to have gotten for rent. Shopping mall promotions and county school visits are also in the plan. Dairy research and education are also supported by the Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc.

"I recruit help when needed," says Naugle, who emanates a strong professionalism in her work. Her requests to dairy promotion committees are always made formally, by attending their meetings. Her promotional activities are organized down to fine details.

On April 2, Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc. will hold its annual dinner meeting in Johnstown. Naugle says six dairy princesses will perform skits or give speeches.

At her coronation, each princess received $300. If she has met 80 percent of her first level incentive award requirements, she will, at this time, be given an additional $200 from the Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc.

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

Microwaving is an established part of today's lifestyle. It is clean, cool, safe, convenient and time and work saving. This week's column features recipes for plan ahead meals.

Beef Rolls

½ pound bulk pork sausage
1 cup soft bread crumbs (about 2 slices of bread)
¼ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon ground sage
¼ teaspoon dried basil leaves
4 beef cubed steaks (3 to 4 ounces each)
1 can condensed tomato soup
2 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon dried basil leaves
About 3 cups hot cooked rice

Crumble sausage into 2 quart casserole. Cover loosely and microwave on HIGH 2 minutes; break up and stir. Cover and microwave until no pink remains, 1 to 2 minutes longer; drain.

Mix in bread crumbs, celery, onion, sage and ¼ teaspoon basil. Spread about 1/2 cup sausage mixture evenly onto each beef cube steak. Roll up, beginning at short side; secure with wooden picks.

Place beef rolls in 2 quart casserole. Mix soup, water and ¼ teaspoon basil; pour over beef rolls. Cover tightly and refrigerate no longer than 24 hours.

About 1 hour before serving, remove beef rolls from refrigerator. Microwave covered on MEDIUM (50 percent) 20 minutes. Cover and microwave until tender. Serve beef rolls on rice; pour sauce over beef rolls.

Beef Kabobs

1½ pound beef boneless top loin or sirloin steak, cut into 1-inch cubes.
¼ cup soy sauce
1 small fresh pineapple, cut into pieces or 1 can pineapple chunks, drained
36 fresh mushroom caps
1 large green pepper, cut into 1 inch pieces
1 cup honey
2 teaspoons dry mustard
1 teaspoon ground cloves

Toss beef cubes with soy sauce.

Alternate meat, pineapple and vegetables on 18-8 inch bamboo skewers. Cover kabobs with plastic wrap and refrigerate no longer than 24 hours.

About 15 minutes before serving, remove kabobs from refrigerator. Place 6 skewers on microwave rack in baking dish.

Mix honey, mustard and cloves in 2 cup measure. Microwave uncovered on MEDIUM HIGH heat (70 percent) until warm, about 1 minute.

Brush Kabobs with honey mixture. Microwave uncovered on MEDIUM HEAT heat (70 percent) 6 minutes; turn over and rearrange skewers. Brush with honey mixture. Microwave until beef is almost done, 4 to 7 minutes longer; keep warm. Repeat with remaining kabobs. Brush with any remaining honey mixture just before serving. Garnish each skewer with a cherry tomato if desired.

Cheesy Potatoes

4 medium baking potatoes
½ to ½ cup milk
¼ cup margarine or butter
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
¼ cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Scrub whole potatoes of similar size. Pierce them to allow steam to escape. Arrange about one inch apart. Microwave potatoes uncovered on high until tender or about 11 to 13 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes.

Cut thin slice from top of each potato; scoop out inside leaving thin shell. Mash potatoes until no lumps remain. Add small amounts of milk, beating after each addition. Add margarine, salt and pepper, beat vigorously until potatoes are light and fluffy. Stir in cheese. Fill potato shells with mashed potatoes. Freeze uncovered 15 minutes. Place in freezer container. Cover, label and return to freezer. Freeze no longer than 2 months.

About 15 minutes before serving remove cheesy potatoes from freezer. Arrange in circle on 10 inch plate. Cover loosely and microwave on HIGH for 5 minutes. Microwave until hot, 4 minutes longer. Sprinkle with snipped chives.

Quick Chicken Pies

1 can condensed cream of chicken soup
1 can green peas, drained
1 can boned chicken broken into chunks
1 can mushroom stems and pieces
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 cup buttermilk baking mix
½ cup milk
¼ cup broken pecans
Paprika

Mix soup, peas, chicken mushrooms with liquid, celery and poultry seasoning in 1½ quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on HIGH until hot and bubbly, 3 to 4 minutes.

Stir baking mix, milk and pecans until soft dough forms; beat vigorously 20 strokes.. Spoon chicken mixture into 4 individual dishes or 10 ounce custard cups; top each with ¼ cup of the biscuit dough. Sprinkle with paprika. Arrange dishes in circle on 12 inch plate. Microwave uncovered on HIGH 2 minutes; rotate each casserole 1/2 turn. Microwave until biscuits are no longer doughy, 2 to 4 minutes longer.

Diaper Dilemmas

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Each year 18 million disposable diapers become 3.6 million tons of trash. But are cloth diapers better for the environment?

"Both types of diapers have advantages and disadvantages," says Dr. Cathy Bowen, Penn State assistant professor of agricultural and extension education. "Parents have to consider their personal circumstances to make the best choice."

At first glance, cloth diapers may seem more environmentally friendly. They are reusable and can be used as cleaning cloths after the child has been toilet trained. They save trees and petroleum-based resources. Using them also keeps untreated human waste out of landfills.

"But cotton for cloth diapers may be grown with large amounts of pesticides," says Bowen. "Electricity is needed to heat water to launder diapers, and the wash water adds sewage to wastewater treatment plants. Diaper service delivery trucks increase traffic congestion and air pollution."

Disposable diapers also present disadvantages. "Their production creates toxic waste," says Bowen. "Untreated human waste is left in diapers and burried in landfills. These feces can carry harmful viruses."

Disposables now make up 2 percent of the waste stream. A disposable diaper takes an estimated 300 to 500 years to biodegrade in a landfill.

Experts also debate whether cloth or disposable diapers are better for a baby's sensitive skin. Cloth diapers may help prevent diaper rash by permitting air to reach the baby's bottom, but they do not retain as much water as disposables.

Although disposables keep babies drier by pulling moisture away from the skin, researchers speculate that some parents leave super-absorbent diapers on too long, promoting rash.

If you're debating which kind of diaper to use, ask yourself the following questions:

— Do both you and your spouse work full time?

— Do you have more than one child in diapers?

— Does your baby's bottom react negatively to either cloth or disposable diapers?

—Do you have easy access to a washer and dryer (or clothes line)?

— Will the type of diaper used affect the father's willingness to get involved in diapering?

— What is the weekly cost of a diaper service in your area and the cost of a comparable number of disposable diapers?

— Will using disposables give you more time to spend with your child and other family members?

Being a new parent isn't an easy job, says Bowen. Once you've made the difficult decision about diapers, you can concentrate on more important things, like getting some sleep.

Darlee Straub Heads Dauphin County Farm Women

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILLERSBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Darlee Straub heads 14 societies with 274 members of the Society of Farm Women in Dauphin County.

"The ladies (members) are great," Darlee said. "I've been a member for 34 years. If I didn't enjoy it, I wouldn't be in it so long."

Darlee's affiliation with Farm Women began in 1958, when a neighbor asked her to join the Society. At first, Darlee was hesitant. She was pregnant with her second child and thought she was too busy for monthly meetings. Encouraged to attend a meeting, Darlee did. Right from the beginning, she was impressed with the camaraderie of the members and the learning experiences that are available in the programs.

"There is always something new to learn at the conventions," Darlee said. She also finds fulfillment in helping her society with projects for local state schools and hospital for the mentally ill.

She said, "I'll never forget the first time our Society entertained patients at the Selingsgrove School and Hospital. The children and adults enjoy it so much. It's rewarding to help."

Annually, the Farm Women members help at the Harrisburg State Hospital Street Fair. The members make cupcakes for the crowd. Patients participate in a cake walk in order to win cupcakes for a prize. The hospital encourages Farm Women members to mingle with the patients.

Members also make hospital kits for the State Hospital. These kits include personal care items donated with money earned by Farm Women's county projects.

Members also donate money monthly to guests at Susquehanna Lutheran Village to help with postage and incidentals needed.

Each of the 14 societies in Dauphin County holds its fundraisers. The society that Darlee belongs to holds an annual Stanley party. Every year, members have also held square dances in a local school, but the school was sold recently and now the members can no longer afford to pay the increased rental fees.

Darlee has held every office in the society. She did not really want to be installed as county president, but, said Darlee, "The twins Mary Pankake and Martha Reed (former presidents) twisted my arm."

Nevertheless, Darlee isn't complaining. She said, "The twins have been a big help. We will be deciding projects at the next meeting."

The Straubs formerly lived on a dairy farm, but then moved off the farm in 1961. They live on 39 acres in Millersburg but do not farm the land.

The Straubs have been married 35 years. They have three children, and three grandchildren.

Darlee works as secretary-treasurer for the township. It's a job she does in her home so it allows her a flexible schedule for Farm Women activities and for her involvement with her church, United Church of Christ.

"We purchased a motor home, and it's the love of our lives," Darlee said. Some of the places the couple has visited are 11 southern states, the New England states and Canada. They have been to Hawaii, Alaska, and Bermuda. They hope to go west on their next trip.

About 18 months ago, Darlee's husband, Marlin, became ill with viral encephalitis. Although he recovered, he is now suffering with side effects.

Because of her husband's illness, Darlee is now limited in attending many of the county conventions across the state. She said, "I enjoy every convention. They have so many different features and it's interesting to see the various counties handle their conventions."

Darlee Straub is president of Dauphin County Farm Women.

MOUSAKA

2 eggplants
6 tablespoons oil
3 tablespoons butter
3 cups hot milk
3 tablespoons flour
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
1½ pounds ground beef
2 cups chopped tomatoes,
2 tablespoons oregano or basil
¼ cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon sugar
Salt and pepper to taste.

Slice and salt eggplant; brown in oil, and drain on a paper towel. While eggplant is cooling, brown ground meat with onion, sugar, salt and pepper and basil or oregano.

Add chopped tomatoes when meat is almost browned.

Make a white sauce with butter, flour, milk, and cheese. Layer eggplant and ground beef mixture and pour white sauce over top. Heat in 350 degree oven for about 20 minutes or until mixture bubbles.

For an ice cream cake akin to those fancy versions from your local ice cream shop, nestle a layer of softened peppermint ice cream between two layers of pound cake. Frost with sweetened whipped cream and decorate with crushed peppermint candies.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Okay, okay, so I jumped the gun.

The lion of March is not extinct. The lion-like weather traditional to March is not even close to being an endangered species, as suggested here last week.

In fact, those sentiments were barely past the printer when the lion stalked to the front door, baring fangs, flexing claws, roaring. His icy cold breath was so antagonized it blew straight through the cracks around the doors and windows and out the other side.

March teased our cabin fever, softened up our emotions with lamb-like weather turned out to pasture early. Along came the lion, driven by 40-mph tailwinds, gobbling up the lamb on its way through.

So here's a retraction of last week's bet that lamblike March was here to stay. And an apology to Mother Nature for second-guessing her plans after the warmest winter on record, and assuming that March would be uncommonly warm, too. Plus a cheer for the orchard fruit buds, still wrapped snugly tight and safe against too much warmth, much too soon.

But maybe the birds are mixed up, too. Robins showed up on our lawn much later - almost two weeks - than the first ones we spotted this season at a location halfway across the state.

Finally, one morning last week, a dozen or so of our orange-breasted friends stalked breakfast in the lower yard. Much of the time, their foraging was hidden by the gusty, swirling snow showers which dusted everything with a white coating.

Rains that preceeded the snow showers had chased worms out of the ground and robins know easy pickins' when they see them. According to the interest they showed in the back yard woodpile, some of the worms must have crawled in among the firewood seeking shelter away from the soggy ground.

And the geese are behaving as erratically as the weather. At least their full-grown children think so. The father goose who so dutifully, so devotedly, so carefully guarded the fledglings the past 10 months has turned mean and nasty.

With nesting time near, paternal concern has turned to territorial temper tantrums. After repeated honking, flying bouts of trying to chase off the youngsters, the male succeeded in sending the kids to enforced loneliness on the far side of the pond, where they mournfully begged for a reunion.

Within a day or two, one disappeared. The Farmer debated if one of our aggressive foxes might have made a hit. I refuse to dwell on that possibility, preferring to believe it was a young male, departed to court a young female on some nearby pond. I hope.

Mother goose seems terribly torn between the mating and the maternal bonds. She finally waddled away from the frustrated male as I watched one morning last week, sliding into the water to join the lone remaining offspring. Papa joined her soon afterward, and the little family - minus one - was temporarily reunited.

This growing-up process is a painful one for us bystanders watching on the sidelines.

Meanwhile, more additions have joined our voluntary meadow "zoo".

A pair of beautiful wood ducks is making every-morning visits to the little pond. When they first came house-scouting last year, the white plastic barrel nest we hurriedly erected in the willow tree got a quick turndown.

But a wooden box on a pole sunk near the pond's edge seemed to win their prompt approval this time around. After discovering the nest box's entrance hole was too small, I found The Farmer - after dark that same evening - STANDING in the floating canoe while he carefully enlarged the wood duck nest's circular entrance. (Kiddies, do NOT try this at home.)

So lugging along her mixed bag of lion-lamb weather, Mother Nature again officially ushered in a welcone Spring.

Start The Day With Pancakes

A pancake is a griddlecake or any of various similar thin, fried cakes called hotcakes, flapjacks, wheat cakes, and flannel cakes. Regardless of what they are called, pancakes are among the most popular food. Traditionally served at breakfast, pancakes now appear at any meal and even snack time.

Hints for making pancakes:

Do not beat ingredients or pancakes will be tough. Stir with fork or wire whisk just until ingredients are combined.

- Heat a heavy skillet or griddle.
- Spray with vegetable oil or use 1 tablespoon vegetable oil in skillet for each batch of pancakes.
- Test griddle by letting a few drops of cold water fall upon it. If the water bounces and sputters, the griddle is ready for the batter.
- Pour the batter from spoon onto the hot griddle. To get a round cake, pour it from the tip of the spoon.
- Bake until bubbles appear on the surface and begin to burst, then lift the cakes with a spatula to see if the under surface is well browned before turning. Usually 2 to 3 minutes is sufficient baking before turning. Turn only once.

- Pancake batter may be thinned or thickened as desired. If thicker pancakes are desired, add more flour. If thinner pancakes are desired, add more liquid.

Pancakes should be served as soon as possible after cooking. If they cannot be served immediately, keep them on a cookie sheet in a very slow oven separated by and covered with a tea towel to keep them from getting soggy.

TERMS FOR EASTER HAM REVIEWED

With all the temminology used, it's no wonder shoppers become confused when trying to select just the right ham. Hopefully the following explanation will help you better understand so you will be an informed consumer when you shop for your Easter ham.

Ham may be purchased whole, as halves, as portions or ends, or as slices. If ham is labeled as a half, it must be a complete half with no center slices removed. Once choice center slices have been removed the remainder must be labeled as either butt or shank portions or ends.

You can also choose from fully cooked or cook-before-eating hams. Fully cooked hams have been cured and cooked by the packer and need only to be reheated to an internal temperature of 140°F. Don't overcook or you'll end up with a lot of unnecessary shrinkage.

If the label does not indicate that the ham is fully cooked, assume that it is a cook-before-eating ham. It should be cooked to an internal temperature of 160°F to bring out the best flavor and tenderness. For the correct time and temperature according to the weight of the ham, consult the label of a cookbook and use a meat thermometer.

Ham may be sold semi-boneless, boneless, or shankless. A semi-boneless ham has the leg bone remaining, but the aitch (pronounced H) bone and usually the shank bone have been removed. In a shankless ham only the shank bone has been removed. A semi-boneless ham may be rolled, shaped, or canned. Shaped or rolled hams are skinless and boneless, formed into rolls or rectangles. Some canned hams are perishable and must be refrigerated because they have only been cooked to an internal temperature of 150°F. A regular canned ham has been fully cooked to 160°F and does not need to be refrigerated. Canned hams are clearly labeled and will indicate the need for refrigeration. Most canned hams have gelatin added to help hold the boned ham together during shipping, storing, and slicing. Gelatin is added in dry form just before the can is vacuum-sealed and cooked. It will mix with the juices drawn from the meat during cooking and will fill all the air spaces and form a cushion. Some people mistake the gelatin for fat.

A term that sometimes confuses shoppers is "water added." A curing solution of salts, sugar, and water is injected into the ham during processing to produce the meat's familiar color and flavor. Most or all of this added moisture is subsequently lost during the curing and cooking process.

Federal regulations require that a ham labeled as "smoked" weigh no more than its original weight, which means all the curing solution has been dried or cooked out. If some moisture is retained, and this can be no more than 10 percent, then the ham must be labeled "water added." If more than 10 percent moisture is retained in the ham, it must be called "imitation ham."

Country hams or country-style hams are processed by the dry method, as was done in the early days of the country.

A dry mixture of curing ingredients, mostly salt, is rubbed onto the ham in an amount sufficient to ensure complete penetration of the curing mixture. Federal regulations require at least 45 days for cure penetration and an additional minimum of 25 days for the drying period. Many hams are cured for longer periods than the minimum requirements.

Consumers often ask about the rainbow-like colors often seen on ham slices. This coloring is called iridescence; it is caused by refraction of light on the cut ends of the muscle fiber. Iridescence is not harmful in any way—it does not indicate that the meat is old, spoiled, or anything else undesirable . . . it's just the way the light strikes the meat.

Search Underway For Best Cookbook

BRANDON, MS — Pennsylvania has been selected as the next state in Quail Ridge Press' renowned "Best of the Best" cookbook series. All cookbooks published in Pennsylvania, or directly related to Pennsylvania cooking, are now being invited to submit their cookbooks for possible inclusion in Best of the Best from Pennsylvania to be published in September, 1993. Pennsylvania will become the 14th volume in this distinguished series, considered to be the most complete survey available of a state's particular cooking style and flavor.

Co-editors of the series, Gwen McKee and Barbara Moseley will be traveling throughout Pennsylvania during the summer months researching this project. They will be searching for as many cookbooks as possible, and hope to gain a greater knowledge of the foods and traditions that make up Pennsylvania cooking.

As in each "Best of the Best" edition, the invited cookbooks in Pennsylvania will be asked to submit a sampling of their favorite recipes. Photographs and interesting bits of information about the history, food, sights, and people of Pennsylvania will be added to give the reader a genuine feel for the state.

Each of the contributing cookbooks will be listed in a special catalog section of the book which includes a picture of each cookbook, a brief description, and complete ordering information. This unique catalog section is extremely popular with cookbook collectors and will make the contributing Pennsylvania cookbooks better known to cookbook lovers all over the country.

"Best" cookbooks currently in the series include Best of the Best from: Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Tennessee, Florida, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Virginia, Arkansas, and Missouri. These volumes range in size from the forty-five cookbooks that contribute to Alabama to the eighty that make up the Texas edition.

The editors would like to become aware of as many favorite Pennsylvania cookbooks as possible. Anyone who would like to suggest a cookbook for consideration, or who would like to receive a free brochure about the series, call toll-free 1-800-343-1583.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The calendar says spring is here! But, when we will be able to plant the sugar peas depends on the weather and the condition of the soil. I've transplanted a few flowers from our old home and I put ivy vines along the front porch. There are still iris and peonies to be moved.

When the wind blows and it is cold outside, I study the Bible lesson that I'm to teach this month. I think the teacher learns more than the others in the group because she spends more time on the subject.

Recently I spent a day sewing at the Lancaster General Hospital with other women from our church. My job was to hem some 30 sheets on the sewing machine. We got noon meal in their new cheery and light cafeteria.

We attended a Historical Society meeting where the topic was "Old Postcards." It was interesting to see slides of other people's collections. I have cards that were sent to older relatives and I've put some in an album.

Postcards have become a collector's item and they are sold at auctions. The first postal card was issued in Austria in 1869. Here in the United States they were an important means of communication between 1900 and 1930. Then the telephone took over and one no longer sent a card saying, "Meet me at the trolley Friday night." At one time messages could only be written on the face of the card but about 1910 the U.S. Post Office Dept. allowed messages on the back with the address. Postage has increased dramatically from the time when a one-cent stamp would take your greeting card across the country to a friend.

ANSWER — Mary Wagner, McClue, would like a recipe to fry down sausage to can it. She heard there is a way to fry it and pour the lard on top to preserve the sausage. Thanks to Martha Schenck, Howard; Elam Ebersol, Bird-In-Hand, and to Mrs. Donald Hill, Apalachin, N.Y., for sending recipes. Because canning methods have changed in recent years to prevent food poisoning, it is no longer considered safe to preserve sausage with lard. Here is the recommended method from Penn State Extension.

Canned Sausage

Shape meat into patties or cut cased sausage into 3- to 4-inch links. Cook until lightly browned. Remove excess fat. Fill jars with sausage pieces. Add boiling meat broth, tomato juice or water, leaving 1-inch headspace. Add 2 teaspoons of salt per quart to the jars, if desired. Adjust lids and process in dial-gauge pressure canner at 11 pounds at 75 minutes for pints or 90 minutes for quarts.

Ginger Kegg Excels In Pigs, Conservation

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Ask Ginger Kegg if you can do an article on her recent award and she gets a puzzled look.

In the past two months, this freshman at Penn State University, has gotten two major awards. Modestly, she asks "Which award you want to hear about?"

She was recently named the 1991 outstanding FFA Swine Producer by the Pennsylvania Pork Producers.

A few days after receiving this award, Ginger found she had also been named the Youth Conservationist of the Year in the state of Pennsylvania.

Nominated by her high school biology/science teacher, Laura Jackson, Ginger attributes her latest achievement to a number of projects in which she has been involved.

She was part of the Seiko Youth Challenge team which had to find environmental problems in the community and do something about them. Ginger says her team of five chose recycling.

"We collected tons of newspapers at school," Ginger says. "Then, they were collected by a local farmer who shredded them and used them for bedding."

The Seiko team also put together a 22-page paper on recycling and made a video. Their efforts paid off and they were named Northeast Regional Champions.

Ginger participated in the FFA Conservation Speech Contest and was president of her Envirothon group in high school.

The object of this organization is to study for Envirothon competition. Five categories headed the list. They included soil, aquatics, current events, forestry, and wild life. Her group placed 17th in the state out of 42 participants.

Ginger also participated in land judging competition and placed eighth in the state in competition.

"I'm very interested in the environment and the future of the earth," says brown-eyed, petite Ginger. "And, I strongly believe that education of the younger generations will be the key."

Her award will be presented at a conservation banquet to be held at Carlisle on March 28.

While she is majoring in ag business, Ginger has every intention of returning to the 74-acre hog farm now owned by her parents. "Some day I am going to own Rusty Acres," she says with a grin.

"But, I feel I do need something to fall back on, that's why I'm going to college and getting my degree."

The Keggs have 600 to 700 purebred spot hogs. Ginger claims ownership of about 20 of these.

She has two sisters and a brother, "But, I'm the only one interested in staying on the farm," she says.

Ginger proudly shows off her new Pork Producer award.

Concerned about the price of pork these days, Ginger says she feels, "Pork gets a bad press. There is not as much cholesterol in a piece of lean pork loin as there is in one piece of skinless chicken."

Showing hogs at the Bedford Fair ever since she reached the required age, Ginger has had four champions on foot. She has also had one champion and one reserve champion carcass hog.

She competes at the Tri-County FFA show in Martinsburg each July and last year, had the reserve champion.

She has also shown hogs at the Keystone International Show at Harrisburg held in October and the family shows hogs at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Ginger may not have any more hours in a day than most people, but she uses every one wisely. In addition to studying, showing hogs, and being concerned with the environment, Ginger also likes to do crafts and crochet.

"She's always been that way," beams her mother. "She seems to have to keep busy."

The Keggs collect pig ornaments and Ginger has an individual collection of her own.

A display of pig figurines in the kitchen china closet is dancing, singing, and flying. They represent almost every state in the United States including Hawaii.

A coin from Bermuda bears the figure of a pig on one side and Queen Elizabeth on the other.

Keeping in tune with her genuine admiration of pigs, Ginger has her own private collection in her bedroom.

"They are intelligent animals," she says enthusiastically. While she has not, as yet, had any confrontations with the Animal Rights groups, she expects that she may in the future.

"But, most of them just don't understand what farming is all about," she says. "They've never been here. They don't realize that you don't just eat pork. Everything but the squeal is useful."

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 19

Lancaster Society of Farm Women #19 met at the Hempfield Church of the Brethren on March 12 as guests of Betty Saylor. After enjoying refreshments provided by the hostess, the group was challenged by Mrs. Veronish, wife of the priest of the Orthodox Church on Hershey Avenue.

It was an inspiration and challenge to go with her on her "Faith Journey."

Grace Landis led the group in a devotional period. A trip to Leesburg, Virginia, is planned for April 25.

Berks Society 4

Charlotte Mauger was hostess for the March meeting of Berks County Society 4 of Farm Women in her Bechtelsville home.

Elsie Rothenberger, president, led the business meeting with nine members answering roll call by naming something they see on St. Patrick's Day.

The lengend of fastnachts and Shrove Tuesday was given by Virginia Tayler. As a sign of spring, each member received a bird house made of recycled plastic.

The next meeting will be held on April 7 at Virginia Taylors' Hereford home. The program will be on gem stones.

Lancaster Society 20

Lancaster Farm Women Society 20 met at the home of Vivian Hess with Emily Gallimore as cohostess. Twenty members brought a covered dish meal for the day of sewing 324 bed pads.

Devotions were conducted by Jane Ferguson and Vivian. President Vera Herr presided at the business meeting. Members answered roll call by naming the year they joined Farm Women. The three charter members are Marion Hastings, Dorothy Crawford, and Pauline Reinhart.

Member Nancy Axe will have a bone marrow test for Brett Hershey. A motion was passed to pay $75 for the test.

The next meeting will included Societies 25, 15, and the county officers. The April meeting will be held at Memorial United Methodist Church, Quarryville.

Lancaster Society 34

The Lancaster Farm Women Society #34 met on February 17, at the Quarryville Presbyterian Home. Bert Rintz showed the group a video on seven stages of emergency medical support system, followed by demonstration and discussion time of CPR.

Co-hostess were Carol Groff and Joetta Wolgemuth. Carl Groff opened the meeting with a poem "Making of Friends". Roll call was to name what we do for a healthy heart. Exercise in different ways and watching fat content in diet were the answers.

Committee reports were given and new business discussed. The group was reminded of the Spring Rally on May 27 to be held in Lancaster. The group also voted to give a monetary gift toward Brent Hershey leukemia fund.

The next meeting will be at the home of Joyce Holloway.

Lancaster Society 1

The Lancaster Society of Farm Women #1 met for their monthly meeting in the home of Hazel Tomb with Rachael Bollinger as co-hostess.

For Society's 75th anniversary Pres. Zahn displayed several articles of antique homemade clothing that has been in her family. One item of special interest was a wedding gown which had been worn by Barbara Moore. Barbara had been one of the charter members of Lancaster County Society of Farm Women #1.

The program theme for today's meeting was poetry. In keeping with this theme, Pres. Zahn had earlier welcomed members with a poem she had composed and followed through with poetic remarks and reports. Members contributed by reciting a poem that they had learned in school or by reading a favorite poem. All members present, including a guest, participated and presented a wide variety of enjoyable poetry.

President Zahn presented a letter from the Leukemia Society stating that they are in need of bone marrow donors for Brett Hershey who has leukemia. Since our members could not be donors, it was decided to contribute $75 to the fund for Brett. Also for Brett there will be a benefit concert on Sunday, March 29, at 3:30 p.m. in the Church of the Apostle at 1850 Marietta Ave., Lancaster.

Society of Farm Women #1 will hold their next meeting on April 4, at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster at noon. Guests will be members from Society #8. The program will be a food demonstration by Mim Enck.

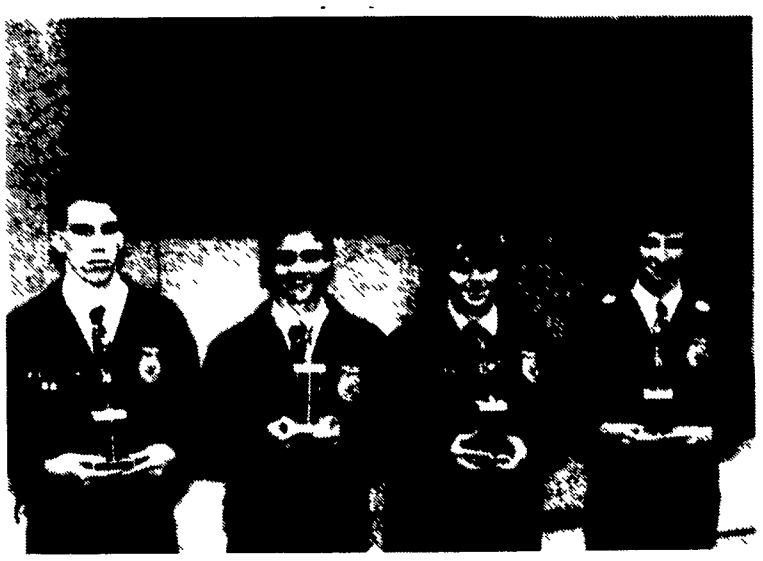
Grassland FFA Recognizes M



The Grassland FFA also presented the Star Chapter and Star Greenhand degrees. From left, Wade Esbenshade, Star Chapter; Justin Weber, Star Greenhand; Linda Huber, Star Greenhand; and Josh Troxell, Star Chapter.

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — FFA chapters across the state began their annual recognition programs the past two weeks. The programs recognize outstanding individuals who have contributed to the community and FFA.

The Grassland FFA Chapter (Garden Spot High School) held its 33rd annual parent and member banquet last week. Approximately 180 FFA members, parents, and FFA friends attended.

Michelle Kerdeman, state FFA reporter, addressed the banquet. Kerdeman, who serves on the Manheim FFA, likened the state FFA association to a "balloon." According to Kerdeman, without the "helium" provided by the efforts of FFA members in every chapter, the balloon "won't fly."

The Grassland Star was awarded to Shelly Ogline, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Phlip Ogline, Denver. The Star Red Rose degree went to Jason Reifsnyder, chapter president. The Star Chapter recipients are Wade Esbenshade and Josh Troxell. Star Greenhands are Linda Huber and Justin Weber.

Foundation Awards were presented to the following: Mike Diem, ag electrification; Jesse Miller, ag mechanics; Bryce Hoshour, ag processing; Duane Ringler, ag sales and service; Marlin Nolt, placement in ag production; Jolene Ringler, sheep production; Linda Huber,

New Jersey FFA

The New Jersey FFA Horticultural Exposition, scheduled for the Quaker Bridge Mall, Route 1, Lawrenceville, consists of two state FFA events.

The state FFA floral design contest, sponsored by the New Jersey Florists' Association, will be held Friday, March 20. The state FFA Flower Show, with more than 600 plants and flower arrangements exhibited, will begin on Friday, March 20 and end on Sunday, March 22 at 6 p.m.

The floral design contest is open to all FFA members in New Jersey. Members will design two arrangements on location. One design will be assigned by the judges and the other will be the choice of the student. Arrangements will be scored and winners will be announced later that day. The students' designs will be available for sale after all scoring takes place. All proceeds will go towards premiums for the Flower Show.

Students competing in the flower show will be entering arrangements and plant material that they have designed or grown in school. More than 50 different theme classes are available for students to enter. Preparing an arrangement for a formal dinner party is one example of a theme class. Arrangements may be entered in the "fresh" or "silk and dried" categories.

Ribbons will be awarded to the top five entries in each class, and a rosette will be awarded to the best of division entry. In addition, a best of show award will be presented.

Behind The Scenes With Volunteer 4-H Leader

BETH WHITMAN PITZER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

MECHANICSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Do you remember when you were a child and were getting ready to exhibit a special project that you made? Think of the excitement and anticipation that you felt.

Many 4-H'ers are doing exactly that in the next few weeks. They are busy preparing rocket, sewing, food, and money management projects for the upcoming 4-H Expo.

Nancy Bear Cartwright is the 4-H volunteer leader behind the scenes who will be coordinating many of these project and activities. Anthony Betonte, 4-H coordinator, has been using her talents to help with the show. It will be held April 3 and 4 at the Camp Hill Mall in conjunction with the Environmental Expo, both sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Cumberland County.

Nancy shared that traditional 4-H runs at different times to meet rural needs. However, in a more metropolitan area such as the West Shore, the Expo was developed to meet the needs of a suburban calendar. The goal of the show is be a showcase for 4-H activities on the West Shore. It will feature environmental aspects of 4-H which is new for many people. Clubs will have an opportunity to show displays; 4-H'ers will have an opportunity to show projects; schools will feature their 4-H projects.

Nancy is a natural in her position of coordinating and judging. She grew up in Lancaster County, where she learned judging from her father — he judged chickens. Nancy was an active 4-H'er as a child. She smiled as she commented, "I liked 4-H and stuck with it for 6 or 8 years." She felt it was a good experience for her. Today the talents she learned in 4-H have carried over to her work as a 4-H leader.

Nancy has been the leader of the "Camp Hill Top Sewers" Club for two years. They meet in the home economics room of Camp Hill High School. The club is small: they have four members ranging in ages from 8 to 10. This year they have made tote bags and shorts or skirts as projects.

Nancy finds it rewarding to see the youngsters complete the projects, hand-in their books, finish the projects, model them, and know just how much work went into each project. Finishing a project is important and she stresses that with the youth. She also teaches them how 4-H is so much more than sewing lessons. She teaches them to run a meeting, from which they learn leadership skills. They also learn speaking skills through show and tell.

At home, Nancy is the mother of Marie who is nine and Sara who is six. Besides being a mother and wife, Nancy works part time as a nursery school teacher. She is an early elementary educator by profession. Her associate's degree is from Hesston College, a Mennonite College in Kansas. Her B.S. degree if from Mansfield.

Nancy uses her judging skills in the area of horticulture as well. She is an accredited flower show judge and member of the Penn Cumberland Garden Club. She recently developed a "Creative Design" exhibit for an upcoming flower show. A large leaf will be added to the bottom to complete the exhibit. The theme is totally different from traditional flower arranging in this area; it originates from the west.

Nancy is active in the United Methodist Church where her husband Jeff is the minister. Quilting is a hobby that Nancy enjoys in her spare time. She is presently working on a design called Grandma's Flower Garden. A huge antique quilter's frame sets near their sunny living room window. This is where Nancy spends free minutes away from her other jobs and roles.

Nancy Bear Cartwright, volunteer and coordinator of the 4-H Expo, enjoys quilting in her spare time.

4-H Expo April 3 to 4

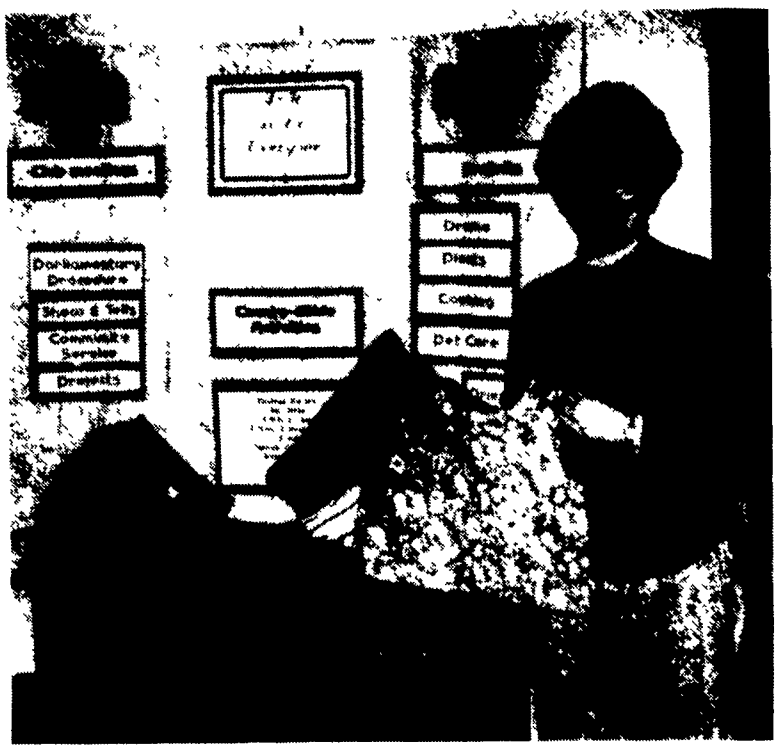
BETH WHITMAN PITZER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.) — Learn how to make and launch a rocket, sew a small article, prepare nutritious food, or work with your 10-year-old to manage money. Cumberland County 4-H is participating with the Environmental Expo Committee to show individual projects such as rockets, sewing, school programs such as hatching baby chicks, or club and community activities like water quality testing.

The annual Expo Show is a showcase of 4-H activities. This year,, the opening ceremony will be held on Friday, April 3 at 7 p.m. The Camp Hill performers 4-H Club will put on a small environmental play. This will be followed by a Project and Fashion Show in which 4-H members will wear or display sewing articles which they have made. First and second year members may sew pillows or tote bags while older members may model sophisticated gowns or a winter coat. Phillip Schuller of the Lieutenant Governor's office will give a family show on recycling.

There will be workshops on Saturday, April 4, at 10 a.m. for youth who want to make a landfill model or at 12:30 p.m. for those who want a chance to learn how to fish. Visitors may stop by at the 4-H table to create a small 4-H project.

If you live on the West Shore of the Harrisburg area your child is probably already doing a school 4-H project such as "Meet the Plant" or embryology. Come see more of the 4-H program and discover opportunities for you and your children.



This display showcases 4-H opportunities for kids and parents. This is just a small sampling of the Expo.

YORK (York Co.) — A search is underway for dairy princess and dairy Miss candidates to represent York County's dairy industry.

Two winners will be crowned during the annual York County Dairy Pageant, to be held 8 p.m. April 25, at the York 4-H Center. The dairy princess and dairy Miss will serve as goodwill ambassadors for the dairy industry to area agricultural and community activities.

Dairy princess candidates must have been 16 years old on January 1 and not reach their 24th birthday by December 31. They must live in York County and be the daughter of a dairy farmer, dairy farm manager, herdsman or dairy industry representative, or be employed by a dairy farm or dairy farm store. Candidates are also eligible if they own at least two dairy animals enrolled in a 4-H or FFA project prior to May 1.

The winner is expected to represent York County at the state training seminar in July. Former county or state winners are not eligible.

Candidates for dairy Miss must be between the ages of 6 and 8 as of January 1, live in York County, and be the daughter of a dairy farmer or dairy farm employee.

Entry deadline for the Dairy Princess pageant is March 27. Entry forms and additional information are available from Pam Kilgore, R2, Box 147, Airville, PA 17302, at (717) 862-3117 or Jennie Hess, extension dairy agent, phone (717) 757-9657.

ADADC Begins Radio Campaign

Syracuse, New York — The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) started airing its three new 60-second radio ads on March 2, under the theme "Milk, 'cause you're not a kid anymore."

Each of the new ads utilizes music and lyrics that parallel the message in the current adult fluid milk television commercials. The radio announcements feature upbeat music and voice-over announcers, who highlight the nutritional benefits of milk for the adult boomer audience.

One commercial is entitled "It's How You Feel." "It's not how old you are. It's how you feel....so drink your milk. You may not be a kid anymore. But that doesn't mean you can't feel like one. Milk's got protein for muscle tone, calcium for strong bones and riboflavin for releasing energy," says the commercial, "So go ahead...Have another cold glass of milk!"

The "Far Side" commercial tells adults, "You're on the far side of forty. But you don't look a day over thirty." The spot focuses on looking 10 years younger and feeling youthful because "you must be drinking your milk."

Another spot, "Act Your Age," stresses the nutritional benefits of milk as you age. "But you haven't outgrown your need for milk," it tells us. The message is clear that milk delivers on its promise to help aging boomers maintain youth and vitality.

The campaign is directed at increasing milk consumption among baby boomers, adults 25 to 49. Boomers represent 38 percent of the population and 30 percent of all milk sales. Looking and feeling younger is important to them and they have a strong interest in their health and appearance.

Cheers Program

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — The CHEERS program is offered to high schools across the state for use in their prom and graduation parties. The program features common mixed drinks that use milk and dairy products in place of alcoholic beverages. For celebrations, schools can receive a free party pack of materials as well as a dairy product reimbursement.

The event at Central Dauphin is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program with assistance from area dairy product manufacturers. Further information about the event is available by calling (717) 787-6903.

Soap For The Needy

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Enter the home of Naomi Yoder on soap making day and the first thing you smell is the odor of rancid fat wafting throughout her house. It's rising from the basement of the 149-year-old, well-preserved, structure where she has old cooking fat melting to use in her soap recipe.

Working by herself, Yoder makes and donates approximately 500 to 800 pounds of soap annually to Mennonite Central Committee (MCC), Akron. It is later distributed in economically poorer countries of the world for use in personal cleanliness and laundry.

Making the soap at home is a good way to recycle used cooking fat and lard since it is a main ingredient in the soap. Yoder gets the leftover fat from officials of the Springs Folk Festival, after it is first used in deep-frying many goodies during the celebration of local history and crafts. The amount of fat she is given determines how much soap she can make.

"You can't let it go to waste," declares Yoder who has been using the fat to make soap for 11 years. "Somebody has got to do it," she says. For now, though, it seems that she is the only local person doing the job.

"I wish somebody else would do it," she says emphatically. "I've got some problems in my hip."

Indeed, when one observes Yoder going about the soapmaking routine, one instantly realizes this is a very physical job.

After heating the lard to strain it — it is mixed half and half with beef tallow donated by an Amish farmer — Yoder puts the 12 pound combination in a big plastic bucket. In a corner, on the cool cement floor, sits an ice cream bucket in which is 10 cups of water and two cans of caustic lye. The water must be cold to begin with, for when the lye is added it immediately heats to almost boiling point. It has to sit and cool to a much lower temperature.

When it is ready to pour into the fat, Yoder adds two tablespoons of Borax to soften the water and add cleaning power. She pours the lye water into the fat slowly so it doesn't separate.

"There were times when it would separate," she says, "and that's a nuisance when you have to heat it to get it back together."

Stirring her mixture with a long handled paddle or wooden spoon, Yoder says she also has used the orangish tallow from sloppy joe mix. Its impurities settle on the bottom of the pan as she heats it.

Yoder has found that using all lard makes a product that is too soft while using all tallow produces one that is too hard. Using equal amounts of each makes the ideal soap.

The Oakdale Mennonite Church near Salisbury, pays for the lye that Yoder uses to make soap. Yoder teaches Sunday School and holds an office in the ladies sewing group at that church.

Yoder has to stir the thickening liquid until her wooden spoon will stand by itself in the center of the bucket. The color has gone from a darker brown to the shade of brown gravy.

Then it is ready to pour into the plastic-lined, shallow rectangular boxes, or half-gallon milk cartons. Clip clothespins on the box edges work well to hold the plastic in place. Hardening of the soap occurs almost instantly, before Yoder can completely scrape out the bucket. If it starts to chip she puts the pieces into a small container for her own laundry use.

Later the boxes are stacked and covered with cardboard and heavy rugs for at least 24 hours. It is then ready to be scored and cut in blocks with a large-blade knife. The blocks are stacked on boards balanced between two chairs. They must cure for two weeks.

"After two weeks," says Yoder, "there's nothing caustic about it. I wouldn't be afraid to use it for a bath," she says.

Her work area is a long ping pong table that is well-protected with a covering of plastic and newspapers. Nearby is a small bowl with brown vinegar for burn precaution. She says the pungent acid works like a charm to bring relief from burning caused by accidential contact with the lye solution.

"You don't have to stir constantly," she says. "You can go and do other things. I can go upstairs and set the table. But I have to figure an hour and a half for one batch," she says. "It's a messy job," she adds.

"The hardest part is with the buckets and dumping them. They are very heavy," says Yoder.

One basic recipe usually yields 18 pounds of soap, according to Yoder. She always has several batches mixing in different stages at the same time which keeps her busy. When she makes soap, it is her major occupation of the day.

"What I often do is have something light to read like Reader's Digest or Guideposts," she says. That way she can take a breather from all the stirring.

It seems rather amazing that the dark brown fat could turn into such a creamy white soap during the curing process. Yet that's what happens.

Yoder unwittingly played a joke on herself, recently, which she discovered when she found the lovely white blocks of soap decorated with imprints of green Christmasy-looking ivy. She realized that the imprints had transferred off the Christmas-edition, dry-cleaning, plastic that she had used to line her boxes. Chuckling,

Lancaster County Dairy Princess Speaks Up For Milk

Robyn and her Ayrshire calf, Goldette, are part of the E-town 4-H Club.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — As Lancaster County Dairy Princess, Robyn Groff has had some surprises.

That's shocking to Robyn who prefers raw milk, the richer the better.

"Anything else tastes watered down," she said.

When Robyn hands out samples of milk punch, she is surprised that people refuse to try even a one-ounce serving if it isn't made with low-fat milk.

She said, "As if such a small amount of milk fat is going to make a difference in their calories or cholesterol count."

As Dairy Princess, it is Robyn's job to convince consumers to taste-test dairy products, so Robyn appeases consumers by using low-fat milk for store promotions. But when she gets home, she pours herself a glass of rich milk and uses whole milk in all her recipes.

"Milk," she said, "is nature's most nearly perfect food because it has calcium and 58 other nutrients that everyone needs."

Another surprise for Robyn is that people don't want to believe her when she tells them that margarine is not a dairy product. And, when she tells them that margarine has as many calories as butter, they are even more skeptical.

But Robyn knows dairy facts and nutrition. She knows that the hydrogenated oils found in margarine raise the cholesterol levels in the blood. She knows that it makes sense to eat a variety of foods in moderation and that people should look at the nutritional value of a food and not just the calories or fat content.

As Lancaster County Dairy Princess, Robyn attempts to educate people of all ages about the real facts instead of nutrition fallacies.

Her reign will end when she crowns a new princess at the pageant scheduled for June 13. The Lancaster County Dairy Princess committee is looking for someone to take Robyn's place. Each contestant must be the daughter of a dairy farmer or a dairy farm manager or the daughter of someone employed in a dairy-related industry or service, excluding A.I. technician, DHIA supervisor, veterinarian, or feed dealer.

Each contestant must be at least 16 years old by July 1 and not reach her 24th birthday by December 31 in the contest year.

Robyn said, "The dairy princess contest offers many opportunities, from gaining self confidence to meeting life-time friends, to a career in agriculture."

A big benefit Robyn gained from her reign is that she no longer gets nervous when she gives a speech.

Those interested in learning more about the program should attend a get-together on May 3, at 1:30 p.m. Contact Julie Herr, chairperson, at 199 Indianhead Rd., Columbia, PA 17512 or call (717) 684-5990.

A glass of milk complements every meal, Robyn believes. She prefers whole, raw milk. "Anything else tastes watered down," she said.

Robyn, the daughter of Robert and Esther Groff, has three brothers, Randy, 21; Ron, 19; and Ryan, 17. Her father has worked as a herdsman for several county farmers.

Since her high school graduation last year, Robyn is employed full time by John F. Martin Inc., Stevens, where she works as a meat processor making barbecue, tongue souse, tripe, and she wraps meat.

Robyn has two cows, a heifer, and a calf that she keeps on a neighboring farm. She prefers Ayrshires to other breeds because she finds them easier to handle.

Her hobbies include bowling, dancing, attending high school football, basketball, and wrestling matches.

CHEDDAR-BROCCOLI CORN BAKE

3 tablespoons butter
3-4 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
Salt to taste
1½ cups sharp cheddar cheese
¾ cup corn flake crumbs
20-ounces frozen broccoli
10-ounces frozen corn

Melt butter. Add flour. Mix well. Gradually add milk and cook until thickened, stirring occasionally. Add cheese, ¼ cup corn flake crumbs, and corn. Place thawed broccoli on bottom of casserole. Cover with cheese mixture. Toss ½ cup corn flake crumbs with 2 tablespoons melted butter and sprinkle on top. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 5.

VEGETABLE PIZZA

2 crescent dinner roll packages
8-ounces cream cheese
2 teaspoons horseradish
1 package dry Hidden Valley Ranch dressing
¼ cup sour cream
Chopped vegetables: green pepper, green onions, tomatoes, mushrooms, black olives, broccoli, cauliflower, carrots

Spread dinner rolls on large cookie sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 8 minutes. Cool. Mix cream cheese, sour cream, horseradish, and dressing. Spread on cooled dough. Put vegetables on top. Refrigerate 5 hours or overnight. Makes 20 to 30 servings.

EGGPLANT PARMESAN

1 medium eggplant
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup Italian-style bread crumbs
1 egg
½ cup milk
½ cup Parmesan cheese
1 cup Mozzarella cheese, shredded
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cups spaghetti sauce

Peel eggplant and slice into ¼-inch thick slices. Combine flour, salt, and pepper. Dredge eggplant slices in flour, dip in beaten egg and milk mixture, then in bread crumbs.

Heat olive oil in skillet, brown breaded eggplant slices in oil.

Place enough sauce in baking dish to cover bottom. Make a single layer of browned eggplant slices, sauce, and parmesan cheese. Continue alternating layers. Place mozzarella cheese on top.

Bake in 350 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes.

Vegetable Pizza is Robyn's favorite snack to serve friends.

When Robert and Esther Groff's daughter Robyn, right, became Lancaster County Dairy Princess, the parents found out that their lifestyle became busier as they transport their daughter to the many dairy promotions. "But I love it," Robyn's mother said.

Soap For The Needy

Yoder says she hopes the folks at MCC don't mind the design as well as the folks who will later use it.

MCC recommends that the soap size be four by four inches, says Yoder. They will accept other sizes, however, she says. Milk cartons are nearly that size but otherwise, Yoder says she can't always keep the size that specific.

Yoder notes that while lye eats through most anything and really hurts if you get it on your skin, it is mysteriously harmless against plastics. She can always reuse the plastic unless it gets holes in it.

Many years ago, Yoder got her soap recipe off the lye can. It is no longer there. She also sent for and used hints from the County Extension office. Other tips came from Mother Earth News. All are filed in a manila folder which Yoder keeps in a handy kitchen drawer.

Yoder says she doesn't usually bother with variations of the soap recipe although she has tips on adding different scents. Some are glycerin-lanolin, imitation castile, coconut oil and so forth.

Six of their seven adult children are married, but Yoder and her husband Paul continue to stay on the two-century farm, where Paul operates a 40-head Holstein dairy with the help of a brother, Lee.

$10,500 In Scholarships

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — A total of $10,500 in college scholarships will be awarded to five young men and five young women involved in the Angus business.

The scholarships are awarded by an Auxiliary committee on the basis of interest, involvement and excellence in the Angus business, school and community activities, according to Carol Bloom, Westville, Indiana, president of the national Angus women's organization.

Scholarship applications can be obtained from Sandra Davis, national scholarship chairman, P.O. Box 147, Springfield, Kentucky 40069, telephone (606) 336-9947.

The five highest placing girls will be eligible to enter the 1992 Miss American Angus competition. Miss American Angus represents the Angus business and the American Angus Auxiliary at Angus events throughout the United States.

Food, Ag Job Openings

NEWARK, Del. — More than 48,000 job openings per year await food and agricultural sciences graduates through the mid-1990s. Only about 43,500 qualified individuals are expected to be available each year to fill these posts, according a U.S. Department of Agriculture study.

Demand will be strongest for biochemists, environmental scientists, food process engineers, plant geneticists, food scientists, entomologists and soil scientists. USDA analysts say the future also looks bright for bioprocess engineers, forest scientists, pest management specialists, horticultural scientists and animal reproductive physiologists. Most of these positions will require candidates with advanced degrees.

To meet the growing demand for people with training in biotechnology, the University of Delaware College of Agricultural Sciences has developed a new undergraduate major called agricultural biotechnology. A unique feature of this concentration, which is offered by the department of animal sciences and agricultural biotechnology, is the opportunity for each student to undertake individual research in molecular biology under faculty direction. Relevant aspects of molecular biology are also covered in other courses at the college.

Young people interested in environmental-quality-related careers can take advantage of another new major, environmental soil science. Developed by the department of plant and soil sciences, this major addresses such concerns as acid rain, water and soil pollution, solid waste disposal, soil erosion and deforestation.

Wildlife conservation is another choice that may appeal to some young people. The college's department of entomology and applied ecology recently created this concentration, formalizing an option that's been popular for years.

Gifted students who wish to prepare themselves for careers in these and other disciplines may be eligible for scholarship assistance. In 1987 the College of Agricultural Sciences established a competitive Agricultural Scholar Award Program funded by a $1 million appropriation from the state of Delaware and more than $1 million from private sources. The program provides qualified incoming freshmen with renewable scholarships in the range of $2,500 to $5,000.

Avoid Getting Floored By Carpet Fumes

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.)— That beautiful new carpet may contain chemicals that could make you sick, says a housing and home environment specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"New carpets and their foam backings may release up to 30 chemicals into the air," says Dr. Phyllis Barner, associate professor of agricultural and extension education. "To some, the fumes are only unpleasant, but others can experience anxiety, malaise, dizziness, nausea and vomiting, headaches and other allergic reactions."

Some chemicals used in manufacturing and preparation of carpets are methyl methacrylate, ethylbenzene, hexamethylene triamine and formaldehyde. Chlorinated hydrocarbons also are used as pesticides, fungicides, mothproofing, mold retardants and soil repellants.

"Research shows that fumes from some of these chemicals can trigger the brain to respond as though the individual is about to be attacked, causing an increased flow of adrenaline," says Barner. "This can lead to feelings normally accompanying emotionally stressful situations. Individuals living or working around new carpets may feel anxious or depressed without knowing why."

Most fumes emanate from carpets during the first three months after installation. The Carpet and Rug Institute recommends taking several precautions to eliminate these fumes.

Unroll new carpeting and leave it in a well-ventilated area, such as a garage with open windows, for a day or so before installing.

Weather permitting, open all doors and windows during installation. If you have a ventilation system, operate it at normal room temperature and maximum fan speed. "Strategically placed window fans also can help remove fumes," says Barner.

After installing new carpeting, ventilate at normal room temperature and maximum fan speed for 48 to 72 hours. If possible, keep doors and windows open.

Continue ventilating at normal fan speed for at least one month after installation. If you suspect during this time that you are developing an allergic reaction, you may need to take a further step, called baking out.

"During baking out, room temperature is gradually raised to 90 degrees Fahrenheit for at least 24 hours," says Barner. "This process increases the emission rate of fumes and reduces subsequent out-gassing.

"A portable space heater, heat lamps or a system called an HVAC available at some appliance stores can be used to raise the room's temperature. Afterwards, thoroughly ventilate the area for another 24 hours. If health symptoms persist after baking out, consult your doctor."

The Carpet and Rug Institute has commissioned an independent study on the impact carpeting components may have on indoor air quality. Results of the study can be obtained by writing the Carpet and Rug Institute, P.O. Box 2048, 310 Holiday Avenue, Dalton, GA 30722.

Children Should Be Children

NEWARK, DE. — Children deserve to have a childhood, according to Mary Wilcoxon, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension agent.

"We need to quit treating children like small adults," she says. "Children need to be allowed to be children; their childhood must be valued and protected."

Wilcoxon suggests that instead of pushing children to perform and grow up fast, adults should give children space and time to mature at their own pace.

She offers the following suggestions for adults who want to help preserve childhood for the children in their lives:

* Help the children you know play games that are appropriate for their age group.

* Keep children's lives as carefree as possible. For example, children only need to understand in a limited way their family's financial concern.

* Let children choose their own activities. They don't need a lot of structured recreational time.

* Monitor children's television and movie viewing. Select shows that are appropriate for their age level.

* Allow children time for simply doing nothing. Relaxation is good for youngsters.

* Encourage and model a variety of physical activities.

* Allow a child's natural curiosity and motivation to set the pace for learning.

Free Milk To Dunk Cookies

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — For the 16th year, the American Dairy Association (ADA) and Nabisco will offer "free milk" to consumers who love to dunk their favorite cookie in a cold glass of milk.

During March, a free half-gallon of milk will be available for dunkers who purchase two packages of Nabisco Oreo cookies or Honey Maid Grahams.

The offer was featured in a free-standing insert (FSI) in Sunday newspapers nationwide March 1 and reached approximately 45 million households. The coupon is worth a free half-gallon of milk up to $1.50 at check-out with the purchase of Oreos and/or Honey Maid Grahams. Milk cartons and tearpads with mail-in certificates will be available in stores offering a coupon good for up to $1.50 on consumers' next purchase of milk.

This promotion is a real success for the dairy industry because it gives consumers more reasons to buy milk, and for retailers because milk and cookies are a popular strong-selling combination.

Animal Rightists Regroup

WILLIAM R. HENNING
Professor, Animal Science
Penn State

The Farm Animal Reform Movement (FARM) recently sponsored a Decade of the Animals conference. More than 45 prominent animal rights leaders spoke to representatives of more than 200 animal rights groups about their experience over the last decade and their vision for the movement for the next 10 years. Their agenda indicates changes which may not be good for the animal agriculture industry:

• Shift from focus from laboratory animals to farm animals. This change has the potential to unify the movement and influence everyday life since everyone must eat. Activists noted that they haven't made much progress against the use of laboratory animals because the public has a god-like image of the medical profession. So they decided to focus on ending farm animal abuse — which they feel will eventually lead to no animal use — through an intensive campaign promoting vegetarianism. Health and food safety concerns, environmental issues, and animal abuse were all cited as ways to reach the public with a vegetarian message.

• Use vegetarianism to encourage the public adopt the animal rights ethic. FARM members agreed to get the public's attention by talking about how changing to a vegetarian diet can help end animal abuse, and how activists must expose farm animal abuse. They were advised to film abuse, take notes, and document it. "Become familiar with the management of slaughterhouses and stockyards," they said, and "bring in your camera once you are a familiar face." (Many of you are probably aware of an incident where members of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals [PETA] entered both Moyers and Hatfield last fall with false USDA identification and took video pictures of the slaughter operations in both plants.)

• Focus vegetarian efforts on young people rather than adults. Since they believed that switching adults to vegetarianism would be a tougher battle, activists agreed to target elementary school students with new ideas related to animal abuse and vegetarianism. One FARM program, FARM ED, pedals the vegetarian message to secondary school students through health science and social studies curricula.

• Separate the radical groups (such as PETA and ALF — Animal Liberation Front) from the mainstream groups. Two factions of the animal rights movement have been recognized: the reformists who want to work for humane treatment of animals and the abolitionists who want to end all animal uses by humans. Animal welfare organizations who pave the way for eventual abolition and the ethical work done by animal rights organizations want the public to eventually accept animal rights as a mainstream issue. The FARM group also stressed the importance of getting third-party experts to speak for the animal rights movement. Activists were urged to use facts when discussing their issues. They will be seeking out farmers and doctors, who share at least part of their beliefs, to make their message more credible to the public.

• Adopt non-violent ethics in all activities. The activists know that public perception of the animal rights movement must change to garner widespread public support. They noted the movement is associated with controversy and radical behavior. Thus, a principle of non-violent ethics has emerged as the new foundation for the movement. PETA was resoundingly criticized by both factions for its support of violence and unethical attention-raising tactics (their pie-throwing in the face of the Iowa Pork Queen and, most notably, their anti-meat advertisement in the Des Moines Register equating the slaughter of meat animals to the actions of Jeffery Dahmer).

The bottom line is that animal agriculture is in for a battle. We must continue to disseminate positive information about the livestock industry. We must continue to avoid activist controversy. We must be cautious not to be misquoted. We should encourage individual producers to become industry spokespersons on this and related issues.

Mobay Becomes Miles Inc.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A familiar name in the agrichemical industry has a new identity. Mobay Corporation, the manufacturer of Sencor herbicide and a host of other crop protection products, is now the agriculture division of Miles Inc.

The name change is part of a large reorganization of the U.S. holdings of Bayer AG, Leverkusen, Germany. Under the reorganization, the agricultural and animal health divisions, formerly of Mobay Corporation, have been merged to form one of eight operating divisions of the new Miles Inc.

"Miles is nationally known as a major health-care and pharmaceutical company, so we adopted the name of our best known operating company, Miles," said Heinz K. Wehner, head of the new agriculture division.

"The Miles image will encompass our crop protection, animal health, and other markets," Wehner said.

Sales of products produced by the agriculture division of Miles Inc. approach $500 million annually. The division operates three business groups, including crop protection products, specialty products, and animal health products.

Since the early 1950s, Mobay Corporation's crop protection products group has been recognized as one of the nation's leading manufacturers and marketers of crop protection products.

The group currently manufactures nearly 20 crop protection products. Those products are registered by federal and state governments for use on more than 100 crop varieties, from apples in Washington state to wheat in Kansas to cotton in Alabama.

Among the most widely known and used Miles Inc. products are Sencor herbicide for weed control in soybeans, cereal grains, potatoes and, most recently, for post-emergence application in corn; Guthion insecticide for control of insects on cotton and tree fruits; Baythroid insecticide for control of insects on cotton; DEF, a cotton defoliant; and many more.

FOOD SAFETY —LET'S CONSIDER ALL ASPECTS

David C. Kradel
M.S., M.P.H., D.V.M.
Dept. of Veterinary Science

Consumers in the U.S. have available the safest food in the world at the most reasonable cost (12 percent of disposal income). Nonetheless, concern about food safety is one of the major problems that will face the poultry and other food industries in the decade of the 1990s.

Often in the emotionalism that accompanies this concern, important realities are often overlooked. Ignoring these realities could, in the future, result in more expensive food with little or no improvement in public health. What are these realities?

They include:

• Experts agree that food-borne illness associated with bacteria should be of primary concern.

• Food-borne illness generally occurs because of some error in food handling or preparation.

• Most of the bacteria of concern in food safety (Salmonella, Campylobacter, Listeria, Clostridia, E. coli, etc.) are normal bacteria found in the intestinal tracts and environments of all avian and mammalian species, both domestic and wild. These bacteria may also be found in the intestinal tract of people and their pets. Thus, these bacteria are a widespread, stable, and normal part of our environment and ecosystem. Complete elimination of these bacteria from our environment is technically impossible and, if possible, would be accomplished only at extremely high production costs.

• In evaluating the entire situation, it would seem unwise to ever achieve the goal of complete elimination of bacteria from our food supply. Immunity or resistance to disease, including food-borne disease, must be achieved innately (born with), through vaccination, or by low level exposure to bacteria. Complete elimination of these could eventually result in a population that would be highly susceptible to even a minimal exposure to potentially harmful bacteria and could result in large epidemics of food-borne disease.

• The cost to completely eliminate these bacteria in our production environment, even if possible, would be accomplished only with a tremendous increase in the cost of food. Many people could not afford such increased costs and increased malnutrition would occur.

At the present time, there is concern about the occurrence of food-borne illness from Salmonella enteritidis (SE) infection — a bacteria that can be found in all domestic and wild avian and mammalian species. It has been more commonly associated with eggs.

Even though Pennsylvania poultry producers have no control over errors made in food handling and preparation (the most important cause of food-borne illness), the industry has responded with a program to try to even further reduce the occurrence of this bacteria in raw food.

Perhaps the actual risk of SE in eggs can be illustrated by a "worst-case scenario" where it is assumed that there are 50 times more cases than are reported. Even with this "worst-case scenario," an individual that eats 190 eggs a year in the United States would have a chance of developing SE (the majority of cases result in mild to moderate symptoms of gastroenteritis for a 2-3 day period) once in 1,000 years.

District Sponsors Tour

SUNBURY (Northumberland Co.) — The Northumberland County Conservation District is sponsoring a tour of five upper Northumberland County manure storage systems on Wednesday, March 25.

Farmers with livestock or anyone interested in viewing and learning more about manure storage and management systems are invited to attend.

Farmers will explain their operation and answer questions. Also available to answer your questions and discuss nutrient management will be Phillip Durst, dairy and manure management specialist from Penn State Cooperative Extension; Donald Haines, area engineering technician from Soil Conservation Service; and George Phillips, soil conservationist from the Northumberland County Conservation District.

As the final deadline of Sept. 30 approaches for signing up for the Chesapeake Bay cost-share program and the possibility of nutrient management legislation being passed in the near future, the tour provides an opportunity to see several alternatives for handling and managing your manure.

Four dairies and one swine farm will be visited on the tour. The tour will begin at 9 a.m. and end about 3:15 p.m. The tour group will view five different methods of conveying the manure into the storage and four different types of waste storage structures.

You are invited to attend one or all of the farms. Viewing these existing operations may help farmers decide if the Chesapeake Bay Program (CBP) could improve their manure management. Travel and lunch for the tour will be on your own. Those interested in the possibility of car pooling should arrive the conservation district office by 8:15 a.m.

The State Conservation Commission recently decided to phase out all Northumberland County watersheds, except the Mahantango Watershed, during the next three years. To remain eligible for the CBP in the watersheds to be phased out, farmers must be signed up by Sept. 30. The Northumberland County Conservation District is holding a continuous sign-up period at the district office until the deadline date.

Signing up for the CBP does not commit the farmer to anything at this time. They will remain eligible for the program until their problem can be reviewed and a plan developed. The farmer has an opportunity to review the plan before signing and committing to the program.

For more details about the tour or the CBP, contact the Northumberland County Conservation District at (717) 988-4224 or visit the office on Plum Creek Road, just off Route 890, southeast of Sunbury.

Broiler Reduction In Farmland Loss

NEWARK, Del. — At the recent Delaware Economic Outlook Conference, urbanization pressures on Delaware farmers were identified as a serious problem.

Trends in population and economic growth, if continued, will place severe limits on agricultural land use and farm production capacity, including the broiler industry, said Gerald F. Vaughn, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension specialist in resource economics and policy.

"Delawareans have to answer some hard questions," Vaughn said. "Do we want agriculture to remain a major industry and land user in our state? If so, how will it fit into the increasingly urban and suburban character of our state? Only well-thought-out and vigorous actions will ensure that open space and economic benefits provided by the agricultural industry will continue."

Vaughn said land values, more than any other urbanization pressure, work against the long-run viability of commercial agriculture and farmland preservation in Delaware.

"Prices for land that can be developed make selling land more profitable than farming it," he said.

The average value of Delaware farm real estate per acre as of January 1, 1991 was estimated at $2,248 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Delaware farmers rarely can expect to earn even a modest return on labor and management when they have to pay upward of $2,000 per acre for additional acreage, the economist said.

"Some Delaware farmland sells at prices well above average, even into the tens of thousand of dollars per acre. Hence, the opportunity to sell is virtually irresistible," Vaughn said.

The attractiveness of development land prices and conflict between farming and urban expansion have contributed to a gradual reduction of farmland acreage in Delaware from 923,000 acres of farmland in 1945 to fewer than 570,000 acres now.

"We take plentiful food for granted, and so do not take seriously the fact that large quantities of productive land are lost each year to many pressures for its use," Vaughn said.

However, he notes that one part of the agricultural industry is taking that reduction very seriously.

"Broiler producers, the mainstay of Delaware agriculture, need cropland as a source of feed for the chickens and as buffer between chicken houses and non-farm neighbors," Vaughn said. "Perhaps more importantly, the producers need cropland on which to spread chicken manure."

Broiler production has been increasing at a yearly average of 5 percent. Delaware faces the challenge of producing more chickens, generating more manure that will need more cropland for spreading at the same time that this land is decreasing.

"At some point, there will be more manure than cropland for spreading," Vaughn said. "Engineers with CABE Associates in Dover have predicted that will occur before the year 2000 in Sussex County. Whether technology can devise alternative economical means of disposal or usage for surplus manure remains to be seen."

Vaughn said that two approaches are urgently needed to perpetuate a thriving broiler industry in Delaware. The industry needs to redouble its continuing efforts to raise the state of the art of waste management. Simultaneously, county and state governments need to consider fully the land and water requirements of food production in planning for land use, transportation and economic development.

"Effective growth management can minimize the premature conversion of farmland to urban uses," Vaughn said. "Without the combined efforts of government and industry, Delaware broiler production is likely to decline, perhaps within 15 years."

Penn State Requests Manure Info

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Manure analysis has been established as an important tool in developing effective manure management programs for farms in Pennsylvania.

Results of nine years of manure analysis has indicated that using book values or average values for manure nutrient content may be off by up to 100 percent on any individual farm.

Thus it is critical that individual manure samples be analyzed on each farm if manure management is going to be optimized for maximum economic benefits for the farmer and minimum impact on the environment.

To help facilitate the use of manure analysis over the last nine years, Penn State Cooperative Extension made arrangements with a private lab to do the analysis and made manure mailing containers available through the county extension offfices.

This program has been quite successful and Penn State has led the way in encreasing the interest in manure analysis. As a result, other labs are now in the manure analysis business, and the college believes that the time has come to expand the program. Penn State will continue to provide manure mailing containers through the county extension office; however, the choice of laboratory to send the sample to, will be up to users.

This program is being conducted to both assist farmers and to allow Penn State to collect information necessary for use in developing improved manure management programs for Pennsylvania.

A copy of results will be sent to county agents. With these results, county agent, will be better able to answer questions and assist with manure management program.

The results of the analyses will also be entered into a statewide database for summarization. No individual results will be released outside of Penn State without prior permission.

Every effort was made to contact all of the labs doing manure analysis in Pennsylvania. Of the labs that were contacted, the ones listed responded that they were interested in this program and have agreed to the following conditions; they will accept the Penn State mailing kits and information sheets; they will report their results on an "as is" basis to minimize conversions; they will provide Penn State with a copy of each result from a sample submitted in our kit; and they have agreed to provide quality control documentation. Other labs will be added to the list if they express an interest and agree to the above conditions.

Comments on any part of this program would be very welcome. Send them to: Extension Manure Analysis Program, Agronomy Extension, 116 ASI Building, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802.

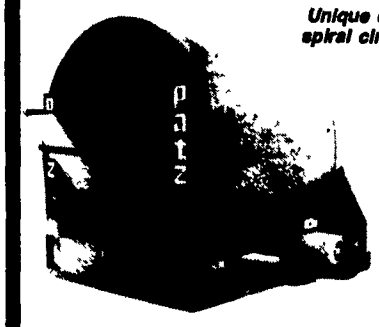
GUTTER CLEANER



Unique central spiral circulator

No bearings inside the mixer drum

Why Patz is No. 1

As the drum rotates, the central spiral circulator moves feed to the back of the mixer. At the same time, the fitting bolted to the drum in a spiral design moves the feed to the front as it mixes with a tumbling action.

Exchange, NPPC Name Scholarship Recipients

ATLANTA, Ga. — Four students from Florida, Pennsylvania, Kansas, and Iowa have each been selected to receive a $2,500 Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) Pork Industry Scholarship, the National Pork Producers Council announced at the Pork Industry Forum.

This is the second year the CME scholarship program has recognized outstanding students who intend to pursue a career in the pork industry. Winners, all enrolled in colleges of agriculture, wrote 750-word essays identifying key issues confronting the industry and suggesting possible means of dealing with these issues. More than 80 entries were received. The 1992 winners are:

• David Elkin, Pennsylvania State University. A junior in agricultural engineering at Pennsylvania State University, Elkin is from Marion Center. His essay, entitled "Pork Acceptance by the Nutrition-Conscious Consumer," discusses "one of the greatest challenges" for pork producers: misleading information on the nutritional value of pork. He encourages voluntary labeling to promote the positive contributions pork makes to one's diet.

Elkin has participated in the Pork Leadership Institute and served as a Pennsylvania Pork Producers youth representative. He is a member of the Penn State Livestock Judging Team, the Block & Bridle Club, Collegiate 4-H, the Ag Engineering Club, and Engineering Undergraduate Council.

• Gregory A. Sconyers, University of Florida. From Lake City, Fla., Sconyers is a senior in the animal science department at the University of Florida. With his essay, entitled "Feral Swine: A Threat to Pseudorabies Eradication," Sconyers says that the disease-carrying potential of wild hogs makes them a serious threat to the eradication of pseudorabies, a fatal disease affecting newborn domestic pigs. To combat the problem, he recommends perimeter fencing around every swine farm where feral swine (wild hogs) are known to be present; curtailment of illegal interstate transfer of feral swine; and elimination of feral swine sales through livestock markets.

Sconyers is active in the Florida Pork Producers Council, the University of Florida Livestock Judging Team, and the University Swine Unit.

• G. Scott Starkweather, Iowa State University. From Audobon, Iowa, Starkweather is a senior majoring in agricultural business with an emphasis on sales and marketing. His essay, entitled "Nuisance Suits and How They Affect Pork Production," discusses nuisance complaints in response to the dust, noise, odors, insect, and waste disposal associated with pork production. To reduce the number of such complaints, Starkweather recommends the designation of "agricultural areas" for production agriculture. In addition, he encourages farmers to become aware of environmental laws that affect agriculture and to act in such a manner to protect the environment.

Starkweather is member of a number of agricultural organizations and has held leadership positions in Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity, the Agricultural Business Club, and Iowa State University's Student Alumni Association.

• Van E. Underwood, Kansas State University. Van E. Underwood, a junior in agricultural technology management at Kansas State University, wrote his essay on "The Health Risks of Swine Confinement." In it, the Mankato, Kan., native says that the health safety of pork producers has been greatly altered by the movement to confinement hog facilities in the past decade. He cautions against prolonged time in swine buildings, which can spell exposure to harmful airborne dust particles and gases. And he encourages farmers to increase ventilation and to take other steps to eliminate personal safety hazards in their operations. Underwood has worked in the swine production industry since age 14 and has visited swine farms in Germany and Denmark. He is the president of Kansas State University's Alpha Mu Honor Society and has received a number of awards and citations from the Future Farmers of America.

The CME Pork Industry Scholarship Program, which is administered by the National Pork Producers Council, was introduced by the Chicago Mercantile Exchange in 1991 to mark the 25th anniversary of live hog futures trading at the Exchange.

Association Names Director Of Year

CORNELL, N.Y. — Endorsements from throughout the state cattlemen's organization resulted in the selection of William "Bob" Bailey of Mexico as New York Beef Cattlemen's Association (NYBCA) County Director of the Year.

Bob and his wife Barb operate "Bizzy Bee" Simmentals with purebred and percentage registered Simmentals. They have a cow-calf operation, along with breeding stock and a freezer trade.

Enthusiastic, indefatigable, determined, and cooperative are some of the adjectives used to describe Bob's work for the beef industry as a whole and for Oswego County in particular. He works alongside the New York Beef Industry Council personnel at the information booth for Farm Days; is a mainstay of the Simmental promotional effort at Empire Farm Days; has organized and supported the formation of a beef club in Oswego County which holds monthly educational meetings; participates closely in 4-H beef work; has placed the NYBCA promotional booth in county fairs; promoted the showing of beef cattle at both the state and county levels; supported the NYBCA/Cornell Bull Test and Sale; and spent countless hours in promoting both the cattlemen's organization and his breed affiliation.

Bob's award was presented by Vice President Donald Gray of Springwater and President Fred Zeiner of Morris at the awards luncheon, which concluded the annual meeting of the NYBCA held at the Corning Hilton Inn this month.

Rethink Spring Pastures To Supplement Forage Production

GEORGE F. W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — Years ago about this time, we used to yearn for the grass to start growing. We, and our cows, too, would have had our fill of winter.

No matter how informed and sophisticated we had become in feeding our cows, by March we seemed to have had more than the usual number of ketosis, milk fever, retained placenta, cystic ovaries, repeat breeders, etc. But as soon as the cows could get out on the new grass, most of these costly troubles seemed to disappear.

Of course, these were replaced with others, like grass tetany, bloat and cows smelling after their beloved early garlic three miles against the wind.

Also the spring flush of milk filled to the rim the milk tank, which was in desperate need of vigorous aeration treatment. But we coped as long as we could say bye-bye to Old Man Winter with his too many headaches.

Grass was growing green again, and with it came better nutrition and new life, both in a literal and philosophical sense as well.

The new young grazing got the cows out of the barn and away from muddy yards. Grazing helped our feeding programs, which often began to run low in silage and hay at this time of year, especially after a severe summer drought.

Cold-season grazing and early pasture could not start soon enough for us, usually with rye or other small grains in this area, and in the Old Country with rape-canola, pastures and meadows. We even helped rye along with an infusion of liquid manure to get an earlier start.

This new green grazing quickly turned into a good rise in the milk tank level.

In recent years, we seemed to have moved away from this time-proven cold season/early spring grazing that offered definite financial rewards for us.

Even though we had to establish cold-season pastures with extra field work and set up rotating temporary electric fencing every few days, it was worth it.

Now we have "progressed" to in-yard programmed bunk feeding from year-round storage feeds, more automation, and less labor. But in the end, there is still no more net income.

That is why we see more and more dairy farmers rethinking their feeding programs and remembering cold season/early spring grazing from years ago. Successful dairy farmers are again looking for quality forages to play a greater role in their feeding plans.

In research here at the University of Delaware in the 1950s and 1960s, we studied how to attain and preserve better forage quality, not only for cold-season forages, but also the oncoming grasses and legumes.

Several mid-Atlantic and northeastern Experiment Stations and Cooperative Extension systems worked together in research teams led by such renown faculty as the late Tom Reid from Cornell, John Bratzler from Penn State, George Van Der Noot from Rutgers and Morris Decker from Maryland to find solutions to a better forage program.

Cold-season forages for grazing and early cutting for silage, haylage and hay were the cornerstones, but an additional thrust was to get the leafiness and nutrition of new spring growth in front of our cows rather than lost on the way.

University of Delaware pioneer agronomist Bill Mitchell was a major force in developing drying programs on wagons and inside barns to overcome the vagaries of weather towards this goal.

Harry Haskell of Wilmington and Hill Girt Farms in Chadds Ford, Pa., George Newlin, Harvey Dreibelbis and other progressive area dairy farmers, including the Bunker Hill, Middletown, Del., forage research farm, were actively researching and demonstrating the advantages of artificial hay drying, all for better milk yields and farm income.

Economics eventually favored heavier grain feeding and these forage efforts took a back seat, but the basic values discovered then were that cold season, lots of early grazing, immature first cutting and leafiness preserved as haylage mean money in the bank.

These truths are now being rediscovered, both nutritionally and economically, in the current hard times.

The calendar date alone was found to be as highly correlated as laboratory analyses between cutting date and milk yield of our cows.

This is just another way of saying that with advancing maturity we get less feeding value and less milk from our cows fed such forages, or as expressed in the easily understood terms of calendar date, a straight line decrease of a total of 15 units of digestible dry matter contents for a 30-day period from May to June of delayed cutting date.

The same was true for many other forages, grasses and legumes, and the earlier calendar dates for cold season forages, rye, with or without vetch, wheat, barley, oats, etc.

Dairy farmers who have rediscovered these old feeding truths have been laughing all the way to the bank. As for the new grass and spring rye, farmers are cutting it in the boot stage for maximum nutritional value rather than letting it head out, nor waiting for maximum "straw" yield per acre.

In this way they are assuring their operation of the highest possible milk yields and profitability.

They want to be independent of unreliable spring weather and free of worry about rain damage, so they make wilted, wet big bales and enclose them with a plastic wrapper, which is the latest and ultimate tool for ensuring maximum forage quality for months. This is the best way to preserved ryelage ever.

Cows cherish it even more than well-made corn silage, and they milk from it!

If you aren't one of the above dairy farmers, but are thinking about it, now is the time to talk to neighbors who are doing it, decide about it and plan for it. You will not regret it.

You, too, will smile all the way to the bank, as you say good-bye to winter's problems, and welcome the fresh grass growth for your new feeding program.

School Students Experience Ag

NEWARK, Del. — Choosing the right college is one of the most important decisions a high school student must make.

Potential students want to know about career opportunities as well as facilities, course selection, accessibility to faculty, class size, and special-interest clubs. They want to be sure the college they choose is the right place for them.

To help with this selection process, the University of Delaware College of Agricultural Sciences invites area high school students to "Experience Agriculture" on Wednesday, April 8, from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The event will take place in Townsend Hall on the university's Newark campus. March 31 is the deadline for reservations.

Participants will have an opportunity to meet the faculty and tour the department of their choice. Interest areas covered by college programs include agricultural engineering technology, biotechnology, preveterinary medicine, applied and general animal science, entomology, wildlife conservation, agricultural business management, agricultural economics, food science, ornamental horticulture, environmental soil sciences, plant pathology, and agronomy.

Visitors will also have a chance to chat with current students and hear about the variety of clubs open to college majors. An optional campus tour and visits to classes will also be available.

The anniversary celebration was part of Vermeer's 20th annual sales meeting held recently in San Antonio, Texas. Gary Vermeer, who is credited with developing the round baler, was the featured speaker at the meeting.

Vermeer Celebrates 20 Years As Inventor

PELLA, Iowa — Remember many years ago - that hot, wretched, humid, laborintensive and never-ending task - when you used to hire all those extra hands around the farm or ranch to lift, load, haul, stack, store, and feed all those small square bales.

Surprise! It's only been 20 years... that is, since the big round baler.

(For many of us, big round bales didn't start rolling in soon enough; and for most of us, it probably seemed like an eternity before we were able to switch over. In fact, chances are, there are still many first-time round-baler owners who are just getting into it.)

We were reminded of those good ol' days (or miserable ones, depending how you look at it) recently when Vermeer celebrated their 20th anniversary in the giant round bale business. It was Vermeer who introduced the round bale concept to the hay harvesting industry... a concept which helped revolutionize and mechanize the entire operation for nearly everyone who has ever baled... anything from alfalfa to peanut stubble.

The anniversary celebration was part of Vermeer's 20th annual sales meeting held recently in San Antonio, Texas. Gary Vermeer, who is credited with developing the round baler, was the featured speaker at the meeting. Vermeer shared his innovative trials, tribulations, and discoveries with a dealer audience that exceeded 400.

New Worksaver BBS-10 bolt-on bucket bale spear features a 2 1/4 inch diameter bale spear that is 30 percent stronger than a 2 inch diameter spear.

Bale Spear Bolts To Bucket

LITCHFIELD, Ill. — The new BBS-10 bolt-on bucket bale spear from Worksaver, Inc. features a 2 1/4 inch diameter spear that is 30 percent stronger than a 2 inch diameter spear.

The BBS-10's design allows the bolt to hold the spear on the bucket, not the weight of the bale. The load force is placed against the bottom of the loader bucket, unlike other bolt-on designs that have the load pulling the bolt through the bucket.

The bolt-on bucket bale spear is easy to install, requiring a 1/2 inch bolt hole. The BBS-10 has a 1500 pound bale capacity. Featuring patented "Bullet" nose spear design, the BBS-10 easily penetrates bales. Two 1 1/4 inch stabilizer spikes ensure secure transport of bale.

Two-Cylinder Club To Host Expo

GRUNDY CENTER, Iowa — Two-Cylinder Worldwide has announced that more than 600 displays of John Deere tractors and implements will be exhibited at Expo III July 9-11.

More than 20 acres of exhibits, with adjacent parking, will be open to the general public on Friday and Saturday, July 10 and 11, from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday, July 9 is reserved for Two-Cylinder members and the media. Expo I and II were held in 1987 and 1990.

Club members from throughout the U.S. will display two-cylinder tractors and vintage agricultural implements restored to showroom perfection. Also, at the Expo site, dozens of vendors and swap meet participants, specializing in John Deere products, memorabilia, and items used for restoration of John Deere two-cylinder tractors (1918-1960) will be conducting the largest exclusively John Deere product swap meet ever held.

Jack Cherry and Dave Trumbauer of the Two-Cylinder Club said the membership rolls have swelled since the last Expo.

"There are now more than 24,000 members from all 50 states and 20 countries — up from 14,500 two years ago," said Cherry. "We are just amazed at the response to these Expos. Over 60,000 people came to the last one and we fully expect a larger crowd this year."

The 1992 Expo will mark the 100th anniversary of the Froelich tractor, invented by John Froelich in 1892. The Froelich invention resulted in the formation of the Waterloo Gasoline Traction Engine Company in Waterloo, Iowa, which was later purchased by Deere & Company in 1918 and became the John Deere Tractor Company. A replica of the tractor will be on display at the Expo site.

Two-Cylinder Worldwide is a nonprofit organization offering its members a bimonthly magazine, the privilege of placing free classified ads, and special offers to purchase vintage Deere memorabilia. The club was formed in 1981 and is dedicated to the restoration and preservation of two-cylinder John Deere tractors.

Persons desiring further information about the Expo or the Two-Cylinder Club should contact the club at P.O. Box 219, Grundy Center, IA 50638, (319) 824-5487.

Two-Cylinder Worldwide will host Expo III at the Waterloo, Iowa airport July 9-11. Members of the organization will display more than 600 restored antique two-cylinder John Deere tractors and implements on the 20-acre site.

Erth-Rite Celebrates 30 Years

GAP (Lancaster Co.) — In 1961, Floyd Rank began talking to his neighboring farmers and gardeners about his new product, Erth-Rite organic fertilizer.

He outlined a soil regeneration program that could enrich plants and grow more of any crop per acre. All that was needed was the restoration of bacterial activity in the soil. They made fun of his idea.

Today Erth-Rite is sold throughout the U.S, including Hawaii. Thirty years of experience have shown the validity of Floyd's idea. Farmers are now planting in Erth-Rite regenerated soil because it grows more. And it can be used successfully in any type of soil that supports plant growth.

In 30 years, Erth-Rite, Inc. of Gap, has grown along with its popularity. To augment its leadership as a source of natural, organic fertilizer, Erth-Rite has become a major distributor for other respected products: Agri-Gro liquid fertilizer, diatomaceous earth insecticide, Jersey Greensand, and, the most recent addition to their line, Thrust liquid fertilizer. The company also operates a soil testing laboratory.

Last year, Floyd Ranck held his first three-day soils class in which he demonstrated why soil condition is important for healthy growth and for weed and insect control. Interest in the class was high and response so overwhelming that it has become an annual event.

Erth-Rite's primary product continues to be a dry, fully composted, organic fertilizer. It is a balanced blend of plant, animal, mineral, and marine ingredients with every blend analyzed before shipping.

During composting, healthy bacteria grow and develop in the product. When added to the soil, the bacteria in Erth-Rite decompose organic matter, release minerals, and fix nitrogen from the air. The result is strong, healthy plants.

Erth-Rite is available from fertilizer dealers throughout the country and from lawn and garden stores in covenient bags.

For more information, contact Erth-Rite, Inc., RD #1, Box 243, Gap, PA 17527, (717) 442-4171.

MARYLAND DHIA

February, 1992

The February 1992 DHI information for Maryland dairy herds, due to the increase in milk production for the Maryland herds, reflect increased production requirements to a minimum of 65 lbs. of 3.5% FCM. The information is listed by herd name, county, total number of cows in the herd, and the average production per cow on a 3.5% Fat Corrected Milk (FCM) basis for all milking cows in the herd.

The herd must consist of at least 10 cows averaging 65 lbs. or more of 3.5% FCM per cow per day. All of the herds are on official DHI or DHIR test.

Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys and Jerseys, and the top eight herds for Ayrshires.

How can a fertilizer that costs $210 a ton save you money? Really big money?

The organic facts, changing times, changing attitudes.

It's simple. With Erth-Rite composted soil builder, you use less per acre. Only 400-600 pounds. So, although Erth-Rite costs more per ton, your total bill is actually about the same or less than a chemical fertilizer. But that's just the beginning.

Using Erth-Rite also restores the natural components of your soil, which aid plants. As microscopic bacteria are given an opportunity, they make the fertilizer more efficient. They hold the nutrients where plants can make use of them, they slow leaching and they virtually eliminate nutrient run-off.

After three or four years of use, with nutrients staying in the soil because of the restored natural components, you'll need even less Erth-Rite per acre. And save even more.

And you'll save even more.

Plants grown with the benefit of Erth-Rite composted soil builder are significantly healthier, larger, and tastier to livestock.

- Resistant to insects–farmers report a dramatic reduction in the need for insecticides.
- Stronger, deeper root systems–will crowd out weeds and reduce the need for herbicides.
- Better roots also give plants tremendous resistance to the effects of draught.
- Plants have higher nutrient levels, with lots of trace elements, and this allows you to cut your feed additive costs.
- You'll probably find your animals are healthier, too. This can dramatically lower your vet bills.

Superb performance from superior products

Erth-Rite carries a full line of soil conditioning products that will fill the needs of virtually any soil to grow healthy plants.

Our products are natural, organic and 100% safe. You don't have to worry about government restrictions, product liabilities, or personal safety.

Erth-Rite uses only the best quality ingredients. For example, our C-Cal product is calcium that is 94% available to plants. This compares to 10% calcium availability from high-calcium lime.

Give Erth-Rite a try.

We don't expect you to believe everything you read and make a 100% change over night. But we do want you to give us a try with a one-field test plot. You'll see for yourself that organic farming with Erth-Rite produces excellent results. So, talk to us about planning for this year or next.

We'll need the results of a soil test. For your convenience we have our own lab, but we'll be happy to work with a scientific analysis from anywhere.

At Erth-Rite, we have the products and the know-how to help you farm successfully. We have bins and spreaders for rent and do custom spreading. We also have a full line of organic liquid fertilizer. Give us a call for more information and the name of your nearest dealer. Erth-Rite, Inc., R.D. #1, Gap, PA 17527 717-442-4171 or 1-800-332-4171

NPPC Releases Environmental Quality Document

DES MOINES, Iowa — The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) Environmental Task Force recently released a draft of a document, "Environmental Quality in Swine Production — Best Management Practices."

When finalized next year, it will serve as an educational resource for environmental issues faced by America's pork producers.

NPPC began dealing with environmental issues in the early 1970s. Since the development of the industry's first environmental guidelines 20 years ago, producers have had to deal with increased pressures on the state and local level because of increased scientific research and continued concerns from outside the agriculture community questioning commonly accepted production practices.

According to Jerry King, chairman of the task force, "This document will serve as a foundation for producer information related to environmental issues."

The task force, formed last year, has established three major research priorities areas: manure as it interacts with the soil, environmental quality around pork production facilities, and air quality. The importance of animal and operator health concerns regarding the environment will also be taken into consideration.

Pork industry representatives have until July 1 to comment on the draft guidelines. The comment period will be broadened to persons outside the pork industry beginning July 1 until December 1, 1992. Upon completion of the comment period, the task force will consider all replies and will submit a revised document to the NPPc delegate body in March 1993 for consideration.

A copy of the document is available by contacting the National Pork Producers Council, P.O. Box 10383, Des Moines, Iowa 50306.

"Earlier this spring, I used the Aer-Way implement and Aer-Way chain harrow on my rolling pastureland. This was done to open up the ground to get water into the sloping grasslands. At the same time I pulled the Aer-Way chain harrow to scatter the cattle manure around. even after the dry summer we had, I noticed that the Aer-Wayed ground held the moisture better and we got thicker and better regrowth where we ran the machine."

DR. REX WILHELM D.V.M.
Stuart, Iowa

"My dairy farm is located on rolling terrain in Reedsburg, Wisconsin. After the first cutting, I used the Aer-Way on my thinning alfalfa stand to get the fertilizer and water into the ground. The second cutting was noticeably better with thicker and leafier alfalfa. I would recommend the Aer-Way to other dairy farmers."

DAVID RABOINE
Dairy Farmer
Reedsburg, Wisconsin

"I have better pastures since I started using the Aer-Way to aerate and renovate my pastures. Using the Aer-Way has helped me get the nutrients where they are needed. I would not recommend fertilizing or liming without running the Aer-Way first.

"We really noticed the improvement in the fields where we used the Aer-Way implement. The grasses came back greener and thicker. We even got regrowth in some of the thinned-out areas."

LARRY STRITE
Rich Baron Farm, Greencastle, Pennsylvania

"I chose the Aer-Way tool because I have steep rolling ground that is classed highly erodible land and can't be plowed. The Aer-Way loosens the soil and leaves the crop residue on top for erosion protection. When planting corn with my no-till planter the seeding is more uniform."

What Will Misapplication Of Pesticides Cost?

Don Daum
David Keener
Ag Engineers
Penn State University

Crop yield and quality depend heavily on the effective application of pesticides. In some cases, chemical costs could exceed one-third of the total cost of crop production.

The cost of some active ingredients has risen from 30 to 60 percent during the last five years. All these factors emphasize that proper chemical application can save money.

In a recent survey, only 30 percent of the applicators were applying herbicides within 5 percent of their intended application rates.

Overapplication of pesticides causes increases in production costs, potential crop damage, pollution, and possible residue-carryover. For example, a 10 percent overapplication of chemical costing $15 per acre would add $450 to the cost of treating 300 acres. This figure represents only the overcharge for the excess chemicals and does not include application costs or potential damages.

Underapplication of pesticides can be just as costly because the chemical might not effectively control the targeted pest. This might require an additional application, which means more fuel and labor due to extra trips across the field. In addition, the chemical might not be applied at an effective time in the pest's growth cycle, which could result in yield losses due to uncontrolled pests.

Probably the most difficult area to assess is the potential reduction of yield because of underapplication of chemicals. It has been shown through experiments that corn yields from non-herbicide treated plots were about 20 percent less than similar plots receiving herbicide treatments. Also, if pests are able to accumulate and mature, the yield difference could be greater in subsequent growing seasons.

Limited information is available concerning what these application errors cost the applicator. One study has estimated that the misapplication cost from potential crop damage and threatened pest competiton is $2 - $12 per acre.

According to another study, most application errors are due to improper calibration. Most calibration procedures can be completed in less than an hour. Thus, those who overapplied herbicides could receive a quick return on investment time if proper calibration procedures were followed.

From a survey, the average overcharge cost was $1.26 per acre. Accurate knowledge and utilization of calibration procedures will enable an operator to establish the correct ratio at which pesticides and carrier must be added to the spray tank.

Therefore, the intended application rate specified by the pesticide label can be achieved for the targeted pest, crop, or soil conditions.

One researcher has observed that an hour spent in calibration would completely tune up most farm sprayers with new components (nozzles, hoses, pumps, screens, pressure gauges, etc.) for less than the cost incurred due to misapplication. Thus, a retrofitting investment could pay for itself in less than a single application.

In Nebraska, 44 percent of applicators surveyed were underapplying pesticides by more than 5 percent of their intended rates. These applicators spent $1.24 per acre less on chemicals than anticipated. Money was "saved" when the pesticides were applied.

However, these "savings" did not reflect the potential yield reduction and poor-quality products due to reduced pest control and increased pest pressure. Since the misapplication costs were based on the operator's intended rate, which might not have been the label rate, losses due to insufficient pest control probably occurred.

As you can see, application of pesticides is not to be taken lightly. It will not only economically affect you, but it will also affect the environment.

Remember to correctly calibrate your sprayer at least once a year and when you install a new set of nozzle tips. For calibration procedures, contact your county extension office to request Leaflet 339, "How to Calibrate Your Boom Sprayer."

Record the results for future use. Check the nozzles, hoses, pumps, filters, and gauges regularly. Also, remember that the time at which you spray is highly important. The objective is to spray at the proper rate at an effective time in the pest's growth cycle.

? QUESTIONS?

USE THIS PROBLEM SOLVER

WITH DRAG AUGER FEEDERS			WITH BIG DUTCHMAN CHAIN FEEDERS
PROBLEM	CAUSES	SUGGESTED SOLUTIONS
System Stalls	Bad braze Kinked auger Feed level too high Too many feed cycles	File or grind excess braze Cut out kink and re-braze Lower feed level Delete a feed cycle	Chain never needs brazing Chain does not kink Chain runs at high or low levels of feed
System runs, stops then reverses	Foreign object in trough Bad braze at drive	Find and remove object Make sure feed cleaner is working Determine drive and repair	Chain virtually is unaffected by foreign objects. Feed cleaner is unnecessary and system cannot run backwards
Feed on floor at row ends	Elbows worn through again	Cut auger, remove elbows and couplers, replace and re assemble	Chain feeders have no elbows to wear out.
Feed line is not running	Failed motor	Determine which motor(s) out of the four are bad, replace and reset.	Only one motor per feed line.
Auger jumped out of trough (and is wound all over the walk ways).	Auger broke	Gather a welder, torch and grinder. Replace auger in trough, and braze. Be careful not to stretch auger.	If chain breaks, it is easily repaired with a hammer and chain breaker tool. Chain does not stretch.
Too many smaller sized eggs	Birds not getting enough feed	Add yet another feed cycle. (May require at least 8 per day.)	Chain feeders provide 2¼ times more feed space than drag auger feeders allowing it to be run as few as 3 times per day.
Too many cracks	Feeder runs too often causing excess bird movement in the cage during laying periods.	Delete feeding during laying period. (Beware that reduction may result in smaller eggs.)	More feed space allows less feeding cycles, which means you don't have to feed during laying period.
Wasted feed in the walk ways	Feed trough lip is not high enough	No solution	Big Dutchman has high-lip trough.

EPA Proves Water Quality Site-Specific

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Results of the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA's) Phase II Report for its National Water Well Survey adds to the mounting evidence that water quality problems are based on numerous site-specific factors.

Legislative attempts to remedy water quality problems, therefore, must allow for site-specific solutions with input from local experts.

The Phase II report is an attempt to analyze factors that can be used as predictors of water quality problems. The report concluded that no single set of factors can be used to determine the incidence of water quality problems across the country. Rather, each particular problem site was the result of a combination of different factors.

"EPA's multi-year study has disproven two widely-held fallacies," said TFI President Gary D. Myers. "It is clear there is no national water quality problem, and a simple reduction in fertilizer use will have little if any effect on reducing water pollution."

The results are consistent with EPA's Phase I report showing limited, site-specific water quality problems and with USDA's report of October 1991, concluding that nitrate occurrence in U.S. waters is a limited, site-specific problem.

"This data has at least two important uses," said Myers. "First, it is important for EPA to consider as it goes about the process of approving state coastal zone management plans. Second, it is vitally important for Congress to resist mandating national water policies in the Clean Water Act and instead provide flexibility for site-specific solutions.

"Farmers, dealers and other crop advisors must be given the flexibility to use a variety of management practices based on local factors such as soil type, topography, geology, and climate," said Myers.

Growth At PennWest

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — Loan volume growth continued during the fourth quarter of 1991 for Penn West Farm Credit, ACA (Agricultural Credit Association).

According to Jeffrey M. Paige, chief financial officer, Penn West has had 11 consecutive quarters of increased loan activity. The loan portfolio reached an all-time high of $320 million as of Dec. 31, 1991, and generated a combined net earnings of $716,000 for the year.

The year-end operating reports for Penn West compare favorably with 1990. Net interest income for the fourth quarter was $1,952,000 and $5,524,000 for the first three quarters of 1991, as compared to $1,730,000 and $6,356,000 for the same periods in 1990.

Lynn A. Ferguson, Penn West president, attributed the improvements in net interest income to higher levels of earning assets, comparatively lower funding costs, and increased margins on loans.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

Poly Square Means Healthier Calves

All-Season Big Foot 5'x7'6"

The Poly Square Big Foot is constructed of Opaque material to eliminate the solar effect. It blocks out sunheat-not sunlight. Poly Square's inverted ribs and 5'(W)x7'6"(L) make it the biggest unit on the market today and extremely wind resistant. It has no pop rivets which means no breaks or cracks for snow and rain to sift in. The unit weighs 100 pounds plus manger & buckets. And Poly Square Big Foot is large enough so your calf can lay in the center, away from cold walls in the winter. Use Poly Square with our side feed station and bottle holder which is perfect for use with a fence in a more traditional setting.

New Side Hay Feeder — Made especially for Poly Square Big Foot, no other unit has this feature. Also has a center roof vent for better air movement.

A Satisfied Customer...
JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm. John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency. The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

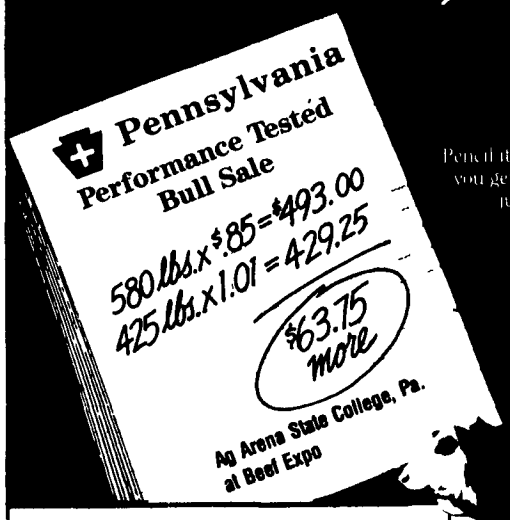
Simmental Bulls
that increase growth while improving calving ease.

When they weigh more, they pay more.



Pencil it out for yourself. Despite the "premium" you get for those lightweight calves, the dollars just aren't there. And it's total dollars that pay the bills.

Simmental sired calves are in demand. As top replacement females or as fast gaining feeders that produce more red meat less fat.

Why fool around with lightweights? Simmental. More pounds, more dollars.

RINGING ROCKS FARM – THE FARMER'S FRIEND

The Eby Wrangler...
★ Better Looking ★ Better Built ★ Better Value

The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limiting the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wranger 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
- Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
- Aerodynamic, attractive design
- Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
- 2-year warranty

Specifications

- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
- 7' Width
- 6'6" Inside height

Gift Initiates Penn State-Ukrainian Program

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The family of developer Alex and Helen Woskob of Boca Raton, Fla., has contributed $100,000 to Penn State to begin a collaborative research and education program with the Ukrainian Agricultural Academy near Kiev.

"We are excited to be a part of Ukrainian efforts to educate agriculturalists for the transition to a free market economy," said Dr. Lamartine Hood, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. "This joint program likewise will strengthen international programs at Penn State."

Woskob left Ukraine during World War II. He later studied engineering in Germany before emigrating to the United States to begin a career in the construction industry. In 1963 he founded A.W. and Sons, a company best known for building and managing numerous apartment buildings in State College, Pa.

Woskob and his wife, Helen, have been business partners in these projects. Their son, George, a 1976 Penn State graduate, is president of GN Associates of State College. On a recent visit to their homeland, Alex and Helen Woskob helped Dmitro Melnichuk, rector of the Ukrainian Agricultural Academy, to develop a program proposal approved by Ukrainian minister of agriculture Olexander Tkatchenko and forwarded to Dean Hood.

The collaboration will help the Academy to expand its programs so that it may serve as the main institution for educating agricultural students and extension specialists in Ukraine, known as the breadbasket of eastern Europe.

"Joint activities likely will include helping the Academy to establish new academic programs in areas such as international agribusiness and agricultural biotechnology," said Dr. J. Dean Jansma, associate dean for international programs in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Jansma will head a Centre for Ukrainian Agriculture to be established at Penn State to coordinate collaborative activities. Efforts are under way to secure additional funding for the Centre, which will facilitate student and faculty exchanges as well as exchanges of educational and research materials and technologies.

Alex Woskob said his family hoped their gift will prompt other contributions for the program, particularly from donors of Ukrainian descent and from public institutions.

Invited to serve on the Centre's advisory committee with Deans Hood and Jansma are Alex, Helen and George Woskob; Victor Woskob, vice president of A.W. and Sons; Dmitro Melnichuk; Yuriy Bihun, forest stewardship associate at Penn State; and Dr. Michael Naydan, head of Slavic languages at Penn State.

Dairylea: Nutrient Management Threatens Pa. Farmers

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — The potential for overregulation of agriculturally related nutrient management by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania poses a threat to the economic viability of Pennsylvania farms and farm families, according to dairy farmer Ray Diebold of Altoona.

Testifying recently before the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee on behalf of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., Diebold stressed the importance of proper management of agricultural nutrients as a useful farm management tool.

Diebold, Dairylea second vice president and secretary, urged the committee to take into consideration a number of items and to solicit the views of agricultural organizations when formulating any statewide nutrient management program.

Diebold told the committee that all segments of the general population and all activities which result in the addition of nutrients to surface and groundwaters should be subject to legislation establishing a statewide nutrient management program.

He said the program should meet the needs of crops to be planted and maintained on a particular piece of land and be structured to minimize impact on time, resources and efforts of farmers and others applying nutrients to their land.

Diebold noted the importance of legislation which would incorporate incentives rather than threat of punishment, as a means of ensuring compliance.

"A statewide financial assistance program should be offered to farmers and others who implement the best nutrient management practices," he said.

Also essential, Diebold said, is that any statewide nutrient management plan must pre-empt local ordinances or regulations regarding nutrient management to avoid inconsistent or uniformed decisions.

Regarding the role of the Department of Agriculture, Diebold said it should be responsible for overseeing any statewide program to certify people to review and approve farm management plans; administering and enforcing the nutrient management program; and establishing standards regarding nutrient management.

Other important criteria, according to Diebold, are limiting conservation agencies to assisting in the preparation of individual plans and education on nutrient management, and protecting those who implement a plan from liability for damages allegedly related to the use of nutrients in accordance with the plan.

Dairylea, a Syracuse-based dairy cooperative with 2,400 farmer members throughout the Northeast, participates in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

Hay Loss With Round Bales Can Be Tremendous

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— The use of large round bales to reduce the amount of manual labor associated with making hay has been a real help to many farmers. However, without proper precautions, the amount of hay that is lost with large round bales can be terribly expensive.

When large round hay bales are stored outdoors without some protection from the weather, hay losses can be high. Recent research results from Michigan State University indicate that four inches of spoiled hay in the outer shell of a five-foot diameter round bale represents a 24% loss.

Table 1 lists the volume and value of the hay lost with various depths of hay spoilage. The four-foot diameter bale weighs 600 pounds, the five-foot diameter bale weighs 1,000 pounds, and the six-foot diameter bale weighs 1,400 pounds.

The value lost per bale represents the loss that occurs when the bale is fed free-choice and and the animal rejects the spoiled hay. If large round bales that include spoiled hay are mixed in a totally mixed ration and fed to high-producing dairy cows, the value lost reported in Table 1 underestimates the actual value lost.

Protecting these bales from the weather during storage will reduce the amount of loss. Although initial cost is high, a permanent structure is an excellent storage option with low maintenance costs. Plastic bale wrap systems have a much lower purchase price, but the plastic wrap material and additional labor costs for handling the bales add to the overall cost of the system. As with any business decision, you can and should identify the costs and benefits of each storage option and calculate how much you can afford to invest in each option.

According to T.M. Harrington and J.R. Black, Michigan State University, a per bale breakeven investment can be applied to any scale of operation (Table 2). For instance, consider a farmer who stores 400 five-foot diameter bales per year. During an average year he expects to have three inches of spoiled hay in each bale. The farmer is considering the purchase of a plastic bale wrap system with the purchase price of $2,200.

Is this a wise decision? The answer is yes. He can afford to invest $23.45 per bale for a bale wrap system to eliminate his losses. When harvesting 400 bales he can invest as much as $9,380 (400 bales X $23.45) in the system and expect to recover the cost of the investment over the life of the equipment. Similarly, he can afford to invest $20,400 (400 bales X $51) to purchase or renovate a permanent hay storage structure.

To Jump-Start Your Alfalfa Production, Think Custom Farm Seed break-thru®.

break-thru® was introduced to the serious alfalfa producer 3 years ago as the first winter-hardy alfalfa variety combining rapid emergence, fast re-growth, high feed value and outstanding overall performance with exceptional resistance to major pests and diseases.

3-years later, there's still nothing better. Prove it, you say...

CFS break-thru placed first in "Average Alfalfa Yield In Tons Dry Matter Per Acre" at the Marshfield, WI 1991, 3-cut trial. 81 alfalfa varieties were entered.

In Michigan, break-thru took top place in the 1990 "Relative Feed Value Test" in the "Michigan Alfalfa Variety Testing Program," MSU, Lake City, MI.

And its area of adaptability extends through Pennsylvania and into New England.

PARS, Inc. markets Custom Farm Seed throughout the Eastern United States. In addition to break-thru alfalfa, count on PARS for a complete line of CFS seed, including hybrid seed corn, soybeans and waxy corn hybrids.

Deep tillage used to mean big plugging problems — especially in heavy residue. Now, the John Deere 915 V-Ripper clears that problem... for good. The 915's true "V" frame places the shanks evenly across the entire machine. That gives more room for soil and residue flow.

True "V" frame gives smoother trash flow in high-residue conditions

FREE YOURSELF FROM SPREADER CHAINS AND SAVE MONEY

The proven Hydra-Spread design can free you from the grief and maintenance of spreader apron chains for good!

This low maintenance spreader features solid poly boards both on the sides and the floor for slippery, no-stick performance. Hydraulic push power replaces the extensive mechanism needed in ordinary spreaders.'

Why pay more for yesterday's ideas and designs? The design of tomorrow is PRICED RIGHT and will be on the job for years. We deliver to your farm.

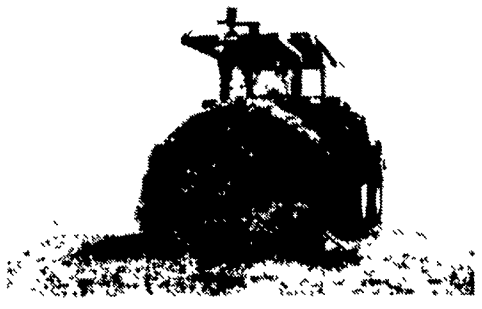
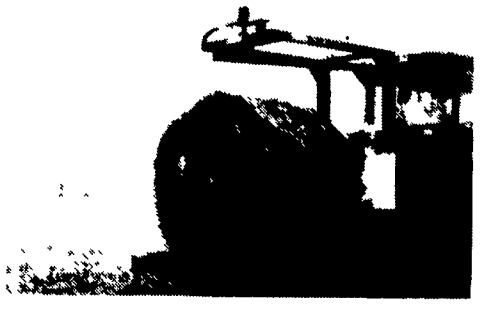
Round Bale Wrapper and Mover

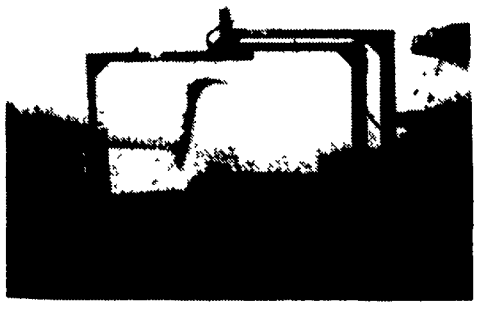
"Two machines in one" This three point hitch, hydraulic bale wrapper not only wraps bales fast but can be used to move the bales to the barn or feed lot. A one man operation at its' best for feeding high quality balage.



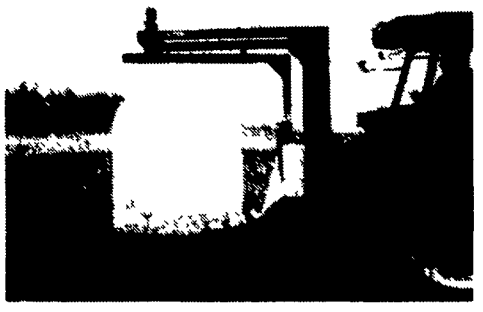
1. Spread roller arms apart and back into round bale.



2. Squeeze roller arms together lifting bale into position for wrapping.



3. Begin wrapping bale; the lower rolls automatically rotate the bale at the proper speed as the rotating arm dispenses wrap.



4. Cut the plastic wrap from the tractor seat and lower the bale to the ground.

GENERAL SPECIFICATIONS

Horsepower requirement - 65+	Round bale diameter - 54" to 60"
2 sets of hydraulic remotes required	Wrapping time - approx. 2 minutes
Round bale width - 39" to 60"	Soft core bales not recommended

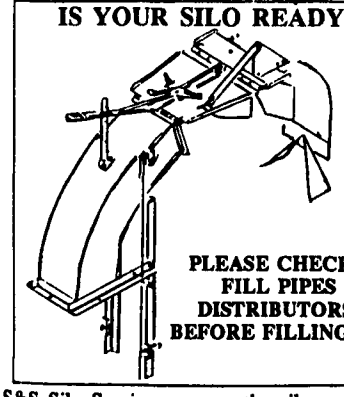
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

ORDER YOUR NEW SILO WITH A FIBERDOME CHUTE OR REPLACE YOUR OLD WORN OUT CHUTE

fiberdome SILO CHUTE

made with fiberglass, the material of the future — and proven in the past —

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos. Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out.

The chute is constructed in full 7 1/2' sections to minimize the number of joints. Connecting joints have a 2 1/2" tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength.

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through. Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute. The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years.

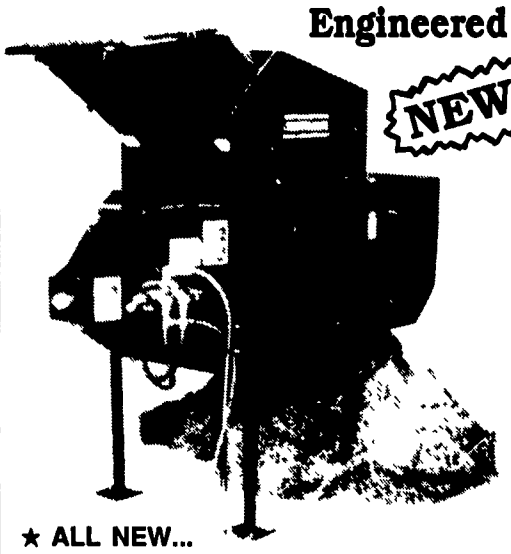
VAN DALE®

Dependability through Quality

S600 BALE PROCESSOR

Engineered & Designed By Van Dale...



NEW!

ONLY ONE OF ITS KIND ON THE MARKET TODAY!

BALED HAY CAN NOW BE MIXED
Baled hay can now be processed into a condition suitable for mixing with other TMR materials in all types of mixers: auger, tumble or reel type. With the Van Dale Bale Processor, you can incorporate baled hay into your ration with less stress on your mixer and be assured of getting the maximum benefit from both your hay and your mixer.

ELIMINATES THE DUST AND MESS
The Van Dale Bale Processor uses a hydraulic ram to push the hay bale through a set of hardened steel knives slicing it into a more mixable 4" to 6" average length material without pulverizing the fragile materials in the bale.

FEED THE LEAVES-NOT JUST STEMS
Don't let your valuable feed nutrients disappear in a cloud of dust. Unlike a conventional bale chopper or tub grinder with high speed cutting knives which turn leaves into powder, the Van Dale Bale Processor retains up to 97% of the valuable leaf portion of your hay to be incorporated into the TMR ration.

NCGA Urges Congress To Include Ag In Plan

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Bush and Congress should keep in mind the needs of agriculture in crafting an economic growth package in the coming weeks, said Tim Trotter, National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) president.

"In his state of the union message . . . the President stated his commitment to an economic recovery plan, and leaders from both the House and Senate have shown a similar willingness," Trotter, a corn farmer from Coal City, Ill. said. "As they work together, Congress and the Administration must remember the recession has been felt not only in cities, but in rural America, too."

Trotter said NCGA supports several tax measures that would benefit farmers:

• Extending and increasing tax deductibility of health insurance premiums paid by self-employed individuals.

• Restoration of income averaging for determining farmers' tax liability.

• More favorable tax treatment for capital investments.

"Corn farmers faced a lot of adversity in 1991," Trotter said. "Economic hard times limited corn purchases by the Soviet Union, one of our top export buyers, and a combination of spring floods and summer drought severely damaged the corn crops of farmers in some of our top producing states. And today, cash corn prices average only about a dime more than a year ago," he said.

"Now, as Congress and the President begin to work out a formula to 'jump start' the economy we urge them to craft solutions that will benefit one of the nation's most valuable sectors — agriculture," Trotter said.

N.J. Pesticide Association Honors Fringer

FRANKLIN PARD, N.J. — Robert C. Fringer recently received the Pesticide Association of New Jersey's Distinguished Service Award. He was recognized for his outstanding service to agriculture.

Fringer began his career in the United States Forest Service in 1951. He then became an inspector for the New Jersey Department of Agriculture in the summers of 1952 and 1953.

Fringer became a full-time inspector in 1954 and was appointed to senior inspector in 1957, a post which he held for four years. He then became supervisor for nursery and plant industry for four years and was promoted to principal biologist in 1966-1972. Six years later he was promoted to chief of the bureau of entomology, followed by the deputy director of regulatory services, and lastly to director of regulatory services in 1978.

Fringer is a graduate of the University of Maine, where he received a bachelor's degree in fish and wildlife management. He then attended Rutgers University, where he received his master's degree in entomology and economic zoology.

Bob was honored with the Governor's Performance Citation in 1971 and the Distinguished Service Award from the Vegetable Growers' Association of New Jersey in 1987. During his long career, he was active in many agriculture organizations, including the New Jersey Agricultural Society, Vegetable Growers' Association of New Jersey, Cook College Pesticide Advisory Committee, Rutgers' Snyder Research and Extension Farm Advisory Committee, and the Willingboro and Burlington County Shade Tree Commissions.

He is a long-time executive board member of both the Pesticide Association of New Jersey and Plant Food Education Society. Recently he was chosen to serve on the certification board of the New Jersey National Organic Farmers Association.

The company that invented the idea, and the machine, has now reinvented it - from the ground up. From the tough "walking beam" suspension to the sleek 6 ton hopper. And the price is right, too.

Then go organic. It will make people healthier and less insane and rebellious. No kidding! It is well proven. The reason that you can't believe it is because you ate too much toxic food. If you want the people to get better, you must do your bit.

And this, our way of farming costs less because our fertilizer doesn't dissipate. It lasts for years, giving big crops, bigger than the neighbors, with no fertilizer for 3 or 4 years. And the protein and minerals in the crop are very high. Some good dairy customers don't add minerals to their feed. They grow it cheaper and better balanced than they can buy it.

THEIR VET BILL IS LOW AND LONGEVITY OF COWS IS HIGH.

And the price difference between a butcher cow and a good springing heifer which you could sell because you don't need it, is also big money in your pocket.

THE DEMAND IS GROWING FAST FOR ORGANIC GROWN SOYBEANS AND SPELTZ AT $12 PER BU. FOR BEANS AND $10 PER LB. FOR SPELTZ.

We can't get near enough. Using our Nutri-Carb fertilizer, you can have non-toxic beans and speltz in the first crop. Free literature explains it.

Proper lime application can increase your dry weather yield

You can't control the weather, but you can increase your dry weather yield by controlling soil fertility with proper lime application. Fall and early winter lime application corrects soil pH, restores vital nutrients, and makes your fertilizer more effective in preparation for spring planting.

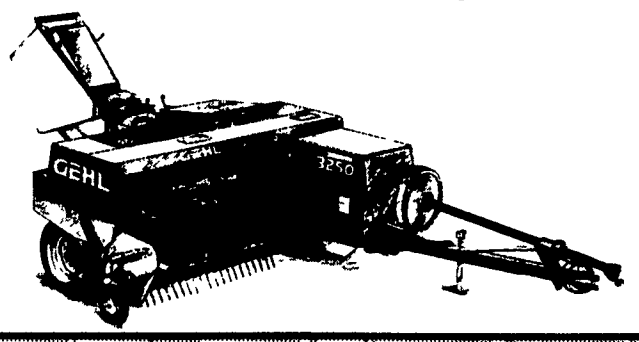
GEHL

It's OK To Be Square!



Gehl thinks it's all right to be square -- when it comes to baling hay, that is. That's why we've introduced two new square balers to compliment our great line of round balers and other Gehl haytools. Both balers make standard 14x18-inch bales and offer these proven features:

- Dependable knotter - Has fewer parts for more reliability and stronger knots, tie after tie.
- Wide pickups - With close spaced tines, flared side sheets and standard gauge wheel, the pickup brings in all of the crop.
- Plunger system - self-aligning for reduced wear.
- Bale tension - Easily adjusted with two handles.

Very attractive and desirable farm containing 71 acres m/l. Improved with a large Victorian-style 2 1/2 story farmhouse consisting of 8 rooms and 2 baths, which has been divided into 2 apartments. Further improved with a tenant house of cement block construction with 6 rooms and bath; also a large bank barn, silo, equipment shed and other outbuildings.

This is a very desirable property that is zoned Agricultural, but which has potential for some development. One very favorable feature of this farm is the amount of road frontage on Rt. 165 Pylesville Rd. and Grier Nursery Rd., which bound two sides of the farm, enabling the buyer to market choice building sites along the road frontage, leaving the main body of the farm intact. This property could be ideal as a Gentleman's showplace, a horse farm, truck farm, etc.

FARM MANAGEMENT

DAIRY AND LIVESTOCK EFFICIENCY

Duane L. Stevenson, Jr.
Multicounty Farm Management Agent

In today's agriculture, one needs to have a handle on the costs as well as the gross revenue.

The profit margin has narrowed over the last several years, thus leaving little room for mismanagement or mistakes.

Here are some basic questions that every livestock producer should know the answers to:

- How much does it cost to produce 100 pounds of milk?
- What are the returns per $100 of feed fed?
- How much does it cost for me to produce a pound of pork, beef, lamb, poultry, or fish?
- What is the breakeven cost for my livestock enterprises?
- What are the number of pigs farrowed and weaned per litter?
- What is the percent of calf crop?
- What is the milk production per cow, milk composition, and quality?
- What is the average daily gain of my livestock enterprise(s)?
- What percent of death loss was encountered of the total weight produced?
- What is the dry cow percentage of total dairy herd?

The above questions are just examples of some of the information we should be concerned about when addressing profitability and efficiency of livestock enterprises.

Some of these questions can be viewed as being efficiency measures of an enterprise. It is hard to do a good job marketing if we don't know the costs involved in producing the saleable product.

After reviewing the above questions, how did your livestock operation fair for 1991? What changes will you be making in 1992 or future years to improve profitability on your farming operation?

Every farmer wants to increase net farm income.

Records: The first step in determining the answers to the above questions and others is reviewing 1991's records and finding out the actual costs that were involved in producing the product that your farming operation is marketing.

At this point, we can begin to realize how valuable records are in measuring the efficiency of the farming enterprises. If you have a good set of records, the information needed to measure the efficiencies of the livestock enterprises will be fairly simple. A good set of records should include tax information, as well as financial information, along with production information, which includes realistic inventories.

Livestock records can be divided into four major categories: mortality, breeding, performance, and feed. Performance records can be broken down into birth records and production records. If your record keeping system is inadequate or not complete, make the necessary changes in your system in 1992. Good records require time and organization, so the records can be reviewed easily at a later time.

After getting out your 1991 records, you need to know what information is needed to analyze the livestock enterprise(s). Keep in mind that the more detailed your farm business records are the easier it will be to extract the information needed.

To evaluate an enterprise, we need to determine what costs are involved in operating it. There are two main categories of expenses that you will be working with — variable (operating) and fixed costs. Variable costs are defined as those costs which change as production varies over production cycle or season. Variable costs are associated with the amount of sales of the business, with inputs or costs that are changed or used in the production of an output or product. Operating costs are avoidable in the sense and can be controlled because they vary with the level of production.

Some examples of variable costs that may be encountered in a livestock enterprise are feed, hired labor, veterinary expenses and medicine, equipment and machinery repairs, utilities, milk hauling, marketing, advertising, bedding, livestock supplies, insurance, market livestock purchases, and other cash costs.

The largest single operating cost of livestock production, excluding market livestock purchases, is feed. Feed costs account for 50 percent to 80 percent of the total cost of producing meat or other livestock products.

Keep in mind the production costs of crops grown for livestock consumption as well as the purchased feed. Crops that are grown for livestock enterprises are not free.

Fixed costs are often referred to as overhead costs or ownership costs. Fixed costs are the same for the farm business whether the value of output or gross production sales is $0 or $100,000. Depreciation, interest, and taxes are examples of fixed costs.

Production and feed determinations are the major efficiency measures that can be pulled from a general set of farm accounts and records for livestock. Measures of production relate to output per livestock units, such as pigs farrowed or weaned per litter, percent of calf crop or pounds of calf weaned per cow, milk per cow, and weight gain per day. Feed efficiency can be a physical or financial measure. However keep in mind that the amount of feed required to produce a pound of meat, a dozen eggs, or 100 pounds of milk can be determined also. In most cases the only requirement is to have a record of the weights of feed, livestock, and products purchased and sold.

A logical approach to feed costs is to establish whether the problem is price or quantity. Are quantities excessive on a per-animal-day basis or per-unit-of-gain basis? If not, look carefully at price. If cost per unit (pounds) is not excessive, then quantity must be, if a problem exists. If the problem is quantity, is it quantity per animal day (indicating waste) or only quantity per pound of production (indicating ration quality, imbalance, or animal health problems resulting in subperformance)?

Production Performance Guides:

Beef

Production:

One should note that the following recommendations are generally accepted figures and should be adjusted accordingly for various frame size cattle, breeds of cattle, the respective ages of cattle, the sex of the cattle, and the objective of the cattle for your particular management.

1. Rapid gains promote improved feed conversion.

a. At 1.5 pounds per day gain (600 pound cattle) maintenance alone requires 53 percent feed.

b. At 2.6 pounds per day gain (600 lb. cattle) maintenance alone requires 39 percent of feed.

c. Maintenance gains of 1.5 to 2.6 should increase growth of individual animals but should not necessarily add excess fat or overconditioning.

d. Maintenance and growing rations should be different from finishing rations.

2. Slow winter gains result in more feed per pound of gain. Slow winter gains usually must be compensated for by cheap spring and summer pasture gains. Pasture gains should be fairly equal to the maintenance gains on the same cattle, resulting in a gain of 1.5 to 2.5 pounds per day on quality pasture.

3. A general rule of thumb is that for 100 pounds live body weight, you will need to feed 2 pounds of grain per head per day. So a 600-pound animal should be getting 12 pounds of grain or equivalent feeds.

4. Strive for a minimum of 2.5 pounds to a maximum of 4 pounds per day salable gain in the finishing period. This will depend on the finishing ration, the manner of feeding (such as unlimited self-feeding or hand-feeding), the stage and condition of the cattle when they begin the finishing period, the length of the feeding period, and the weight/quality grade desired for the end product. Finishing 750-800 pound grass-fed steers could gain 350 to 400 pounds in 100 days on a 16 percent self-fed ration, yielding a 1,110 to 1,200 pound live weight, producing a 700 to 800 pound select to choice carcass.

Death Loss — strive for zero! Loss is usually attributed to shipping, weather conditions upon arrival and during shipping, and prehandling techniques and procedures prior to sale or shipping.

1. Under 2 percent for long-fed calves.
2. Under 1 percent for long-fed yearlings.
3. Under .6 percent for short-fed yearlings

Feeding Margins

1. Operating on a negative feeding margin (buying price per pound is higher than selling price per pound):

a. As the negative margin widens, it becomes increasingly important for the gain added to the feeder animal to make up a higher proportion of the final weight.

John Deere... A Way of Life

b. Gain must be added at an increasingly lower cost per pound as the negative margin widens.

c. Gain must be added to the animal at an even lower cost pe4 pound as the amount of gain decreases in relation to the weight purchased.

Labor

1. .8 to 1.0 hour per hundredweight of gain.
2. 2 to 4 hours per 100-head days.

Dairy

Production:

1. Large breeds: 16,000 pounds milk (3.6 percent B.F.) minimum per average cow.
2. Small breeds: 11,000 pounds milk (5.4 percent B.F.) minimum per average cow.
3. Produce a high percent of milk in nonsurplus months.
4. Keep cows in production 86 to 90 percent of the year.
5. Keep cows calving every 12.5 months.

Death loss and Replacements

1. Maintain health and quality breeding program to keep annual replacements between 25 and 30 percent.
2. Calves 1 day to 27 months; death loss under 10 percent.
3. Use only the best sires available on the best cows for replacements.

Labor

1. Annual labor under 60 hours per cow average number depending on type of facilities.
2. Labor per 100 pounds milk produced: under .5 hour.
3. Cost generally runs about 20 percent of total costs.
4. Sell more than 500,000 pounds of milk for stall barn per man annually; 600,000 pounds of milk for freestall.

Swine (Farrow to Finish)

Production:

1. Gains: 235-pound finished hogs in 5 months (150 days); 1.3 pounds per day average gain. Finished hogs may range from 220 to 245 pounds live. Generally it does not pay to feed heavier weight market hogs unless you have a specific market for them, such as custom kill, etc.
2. Pigs farrowed and pigs weaned. Maintain practical and optimal levels of production.
2. Pigs farrowed

a. 10 pigs or better from sows (minimum 90 percent at weaning).

b. 8 pigs or better from gilts (minimum 90 percent or better at weaning).

c. 85 percent or better of pigs farrowed reach market weight.

3. Weaning weights

a. At eight weeks: from sows, 40 pounds; from gilts, 35 pounds.

b. At six weeks: from sows, 26 pounds; from gilts, 23 pounds.

4. Finishing: Strive to average 1.3 pounds salable gain per head per day or better.

Death loss

1. From farrowing to weaning: strive for under 10 percent minimum and to 15 percent maximum.
2. During finishing: under 3 percent.

Labor

1. Under 35 hours per average sow on hand (includes labor for finishing operation).
2. Generally runs 10 to 15 percent of total costs.

Conclusion

Keep in mind that the measurements used in this article are just guidelines and I hope your livestock enterprise(s) are better.

Also, year-end results or records measure the effectiveness of the farm plan or budget. A disappointing outcome does not mean the plan was poor; there are many uncertainties in agriculture.

Aside from the uncertainties, there are also factors such as misjudgments and incorrect information that can be avoided in future planning activities after seeing what went wrong or what improvements can be made to enhance profitability in the enterprise.

A comparison of your livestock enterprise's efficiency determinations over time will help you measure the movement of your farming business toward your goals and objectives.

Some of the goals may be to expand the farm size, more pigs weaned per litter, more pounds of milk per cow, obtaining the highest corn yield in the county, or increasing net farm income.

Maybe one of the most important goals you could set in 1992 is to start keeping a better set of records so you can see how your different enterprises in your farming operation either contribute to or take away from the net profits.

Remember, a good set of records is quite valuable and they don't lie.
